GERMANS TO SAVE LINE OF CONNECTION

Desperate Assaults of Picked Troops Due to British Menace Against Lines to Belgian Coast.

ENEMY WASTAGE OF MAN POWER IS HUGE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The desperate onslaughts of picked German storm battalions is due to fear of the British menace against the German line of communications to Ostend and Zeebrugge naval bases. Secretary of War Baker's second weekly war summary declared.

Baker said the Menin road battle shows the German fighting stamina is deteriorating.

Man Power Wastage Large. Baker declared national guard mobilization and the assembling of the national army was proceeding rapidly and satisfactorily. He declared the enemy wastage of man power was enormous. He said the Germans used 35 new divisions on the Aisne front this year, while only 25 divisions were used at the Verdun fighting a year ago.

The Ypres salient continues to be the center of military interest along the western front. The battle of Menin Road, which promises to be one of the great battles of the war, is following its normal course.

Zonnebeke Firmly Held. "Last week we recorded gains of the British in this sector. This week we must note the desperate attempt Germany is making to retake her lost positions beginning last Saturday and the constantly increasing violence of the counter attacks, which reached a climax on the 27th, when powerful onslaughts by storming battalions of the enemy, endeavored vainly to regain their lost objectives. The villages of Zonnebeke, the center of the conflict, is now firmly held by the British.

It is now evident the efforts of the enemy in this sector were not actuated by the desire to regain their lost terrain, and are little more than tactical value, nor must their persistent attack be considered more than a normal reaction of a modern field engagement in which counter-attack invariably follows an attack, but rather it is to be noted the enemy realizes fully the immense strategic importance of the British thrust along the Menin Road.

Communication Line Threatened. "The British advance at the Ypres salient definitely threatens the enemy line communications to the Belgian coast. The Ostend-Lille railroad, which feeds the German naval bases, to within range of the British guns."

Green was taken off the train at The Dalles last Monday by a police officer. As the officer stepped off the train the colored man ran back through the aisle and jumped off on the other side. He was caught after a short chase. However his booty was not upon him and it was not until Friday that the officers found it on the dyke where he had found it.
