SOLDIER TANGLED UP IN BOXING ROMANCE

APPEARS TO BE HEADED
STRAIGHT TOWARD A POST-
BELLUM WEDDING.

BY J. W. PEGLER
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
WITH THE AMERICAN EXPEDITIONARY ARMY, France, Jan. 19.—(By Mail)—Bud Carey showed up at the Y. M. C. A. with his girl on his arm to watch the hattering luffers perform the evening's boxing card.

"Him" and "her" got chairs down near the ring-side where he could feel the spray of the sponge between rounds and watch the red welts grow bigger and bigger on punished shoulders.

Bud didn't poke his red neck under the ropes tonight. Not him; he's a mere spectator from this day on. By a paradox of feminine nature Bud, who won the gal by winning a box-fight, stands to lose her if he fights again.

The romance seems to be headed straight toward a post-bellum wedding. It began a week ago and since then Bud has taken to spearmint, instead of his luscious old favorite, Battlex.

Last Saturday night Bud was billed to battle a cook from L. Company. "Also a member of this club"—four rounds a decision. The cook did not show and Bud stalked into midring with the mits on to speak a challenge to any "other 144 pounder in the battalion." And from the side of the blue-eyed vision in one of the back ranks of spectators a gent spoke up who allowed he couldn't stand to see anyone really spooling for a fight. Maybe he reckoned to put himself in Ace High with Her by stepping into the ring and making a monkey out of Bud Carey.

Anyhow he elbowed through the crowd and hops onto the platform. A couple of his particular buddies pull off his boots for him while a couple of others are fixing on the gloves. They get a word from the referee. The old dish-pan jangle—and the show is on.

Briefly, Bud didn't have to step out at all. He just played with the Ambitious Man.

Well, next day being Sunday, Bud strolls down the Company street past the bakery where he has seen Ma-mie selling those big life-preserver loaves of war-bread. She's sitting out in front and he salutes with a smile. Bud alleges it's a "bon jour" though it's obviously fixing to rain.

Well, they sat there together until almost sundown, she explaining that the likes to see clean athletics but just couldn't be fond of an habitual boxer.

Bud's been calling around at her place all week, learning French and all that and that. Her daddy's away at the war but grandpa admits Bud would make a fine outstanding grand-son-in-law.

So that's why Bud has dropped out of the Third Battalion's boxing programs.

And you wouldn't hardly blame him if you could see Louise.

The ship industry is one big lesson of the benefits of payrolls.

How can any merchant adopt methods that operate against Oregon payrolls, with such evidence before him? Not one but several with a kindly request to be derived from payrolls some one else holds it.

But how many try to increase those already here by encouraging the sale and use of local output in all lines?

This business of patronizing home industries is not an idea invented in Oregon—we have no patent on it.

The truth is, we are billed behind our sister states in the locality with which they stand by the factories that do so much to make prosperity.

It is not a question of some substitutes of sympathy.

It is one of duty and order.

The government advises the nation buy local products.

It is patriotic to do so and the person who falls in the shelter class.

He is keeping step with the man who boasts that this is his own, his native land, but refuses to buy a Liberty Bond.

Don't be a slacker—don't wait to be drafted—be a volunteer for Oregon products.

Men now grown will have been dead and probably long forgotten before experiences and conditions now prevailing will again take place.

It is surely hoped that war, such as now prevails, will never again be visited upon mankind.

Yet it is the war that brought about the present circumstances.

We have passed from the ordinary to the extraordinary condition of most everything.

Conservation and cooperation is the general order of things.

We are asked and we give freely to the requirements of the government, but we owe also a duty to the immediate community we call our home city and state.

WARTIME FIGURE SLENDER STILL

Corsets retain their ancient name and the spring model retains also that youthful straightness and slimmness which is so different from the average female figure—even in a sugarless era.
