WELL WIN, SAYS PEGGY

Alto Today
Like most English persons in America, Miss Peggy Hyland is intensely interested in the war. The daily screen favorite follows event on the battlefield and in the warring countries day by day. Her feelings are deeply alive. She believes that while the English and the Americans were cousins before the war was started, they are brothers and sisters today.

ARMY TO COOPERATE IN FOOD CONSERVATION

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The army will cooperate with the food administration in conserving foodstuffs in the transportation of troops to France. The war department has made public an order requiring during the present emergency that transports comply with the Hoover restrictions in the use of wheat, meat and pork. Officers and enlisted men traveling on commercial liners will observe the same restrictions as civilian passengers.

ARMY NURSE JUMPS IN AND SAVES MEN

LONDON, April 15.—Driver H. Bevan, one of the survivors of the transport Aragon, which was torpedoed in the Mediterranean writing to relatives at Pontypool, says:
"We ought to be proud of our women. Fancy seeing a nurse jump overboard, saying, 'I must save the Tommies.' She saved a dozen by swimming out to them. I did not see one girl give way."
"There is only one country in the world which can breed such women."

Autos Once More Seen By Folks at Meacham

J. D. Casey Makes Good As Liberty Loan Solicitor; Literature Society Program Saturday Night Was Feature of Interest.
(East Oregonian Special.)
MEACHAM, Ore., April 15.—On Monday four autos got over the mountain roads, the first to get over for many months. Since then, there have been many travelers going through. George Hilyard was a visitor in town on Tuesday, having come over from Telocuset.
J. D. Casey made a business trip to Pendleton on Wednesday.
John Dockweiler made a trip to La Grande on Wednesday.
A good crowd went from here on Friday night to attend the dance at Kamela. All reported a most enjoyable evening spent.
Mrs. John Casey and baby daughter and Miss Bessie Davidson went to Pendleton on Saturday to do shopping.
Ben Marlin made a trip to Pendleton on Saturday.
On Saturday and Sunday it was winter again, several inches of snow having fallen again each day.
Meacham's raise in the Third Liberty Loan was $1250 outside of about that amount which the railroad employees gave. Mr. J. D. Casey made a great success as district chairman, considering the few inhabitants of Meacham.

OUTLAWS LOSE IN LAST BATTLE

Convinced that at last, they have destroyed Lost Mine and slain its miners, a band of desperate outlaws, employed by an agent of the Central Powers, swoops down on the little mining town, loots the bank and stores and start to burn the place before fleeing in safety across the Mexican line. A sheriff's posse attacks them but is driven off and the town is apparently doomed when a troop of U. S. cavalry arrives and after a fierce battle kills or captures every bandit and the agent.
This is the high light of the fifteenth episode of "The Fighting Trail" the Greater Vitagraph serial which will appear in the Pastime Theatre today.
It is one of the most realistic scenes ever filmed, in which 200 men are engaged and the smoke of battle all but obscured the camera. Coming in the fifteenth episode, it is a fitting climax to "The Fighting Trail" Greater Vitagraph's amazing serial of adventure, intrigue and romance and the great outdoors.

STIRRING RED-BLOODED BATTLE FOR LIFE IS TERRIBLY REAL

"I don't believe there was ever a picture made with such a fight between two humans—its terrorliness fairly makes one quiver with excitement."
An authority says:
"After a man has viewed 'When a Man Sees Red,' he finds that his fancies have gripped the arms of his chair, and that his forehead is moist with the tension of the scenes. It is the kind of picture that words can not adequately describe. One must see this wonderful picturization of a strong man's emotion."
"I have seen William Farnum in some great pictures, but 'When a Man Sees Red' is greater than any. I can appreciate its exactness of detail. Once I was a sailor, and never have I seen on the screen such remarkable reproductions of sailor life and atmosphere. There isn't a scene in the marine 'locations' or aboard ship that would disturb a mariner's oft ignored ideas of exactness. Our real sailor-man frowns upon the landlubber's interpretations of sea life."
"The shipwreck is wonderful. No one

COUNTRY CLUB

This light car will go anywhere that wheels can get traction, and will travel as fast as it is safe to ride. The motor is well balanced and can be depended on for quick get-away, as well as for grueling long distance runs. It has lots of pep and almost limitless endurance. The toughness of materials which go into the car, the strength in its frame, axles, springs and steering mechanism and the extra powerful brakes, provide a comfortable margin of safety. Yet there is no surplus weight to increase gasoline consumption, strength is insured by quality of materials rather than by unnecessary bulk. Over-sized tires increase the tire mileage. The best type of bearing, finely ground and fitted with mathematical accuracy, together with a highly perfected lubrication system, reduce friction to a minimum and help make the Willys-Overland car very economical to operate.
