"GOING WEST."

If it should be that we will not come
Your way again,
When Peace comes with muffled drum
Some day again:
If it should be that we will not know
The old, old ways—
The hearth of home—the twilight glow
Of waning days—
If it should be that Fate, at last,
Should call us in,
Beyond the great sheiks hurtling past—
The endless din—
Or if it happens from the hosts
Our time's at hand
To leave and join the haunting
ghosts
Of no man's land—
Think not of us as scarred and maimed
Beyond the foam—
Nor those whom sudden death claimed
So far from home—
Think not of us with tears that creep,
Nor hearts that ache,
But rather as a child asleep
Till dawn shall break—
Yes, as a child who heard the call,
Who saw at night
The glow of home beyond the wall,
The waiting light;
Beyond the last and dread
alarms
Of steel and lance,
Safe now within the sheltering arms
OF MOTHER FRANCE.
—By Lieutenant Grantland Rice.

BEWARE PEACE DRIVE

WHEN in his recent address Lloyd George, the British prime minister, said, "The longer the war lasts the sterner must be the economic terms we impose on the foe," he used what seems to be hard words, but in doing so we may be sure he had a purpose. For example the allies must beware lest a way is left open for a peace that is no peace. It is freely talked that the next great move planned by Germany is to be a peace drive—a drive for a German peace.

The trend of statements by public men in Germany of late has been strongly significant, in one direction. There is a great, an overwhelming desire to see the downfall of Lloyd George in England and Clemenceau in France in order that Germany may begin a peace drive of unprecedented proportions. That drive would have for its basis efforts to win acceptance by Germany's enemies of the treaties of Brest-Litovsk and Bukharest, increased colonial possessions for Germany, favorable trade arrangements and abundant supplies of raw materials.

Lloyd George knows that Germany will make peace at this time only on terms ruinous to other nations. Germany made war fully intending to enrich its people with the loot of other lands. It still intends to make its enemies pay the debts it has incurred by its warring. To do this it must have Russia to exploit and it must drive hard bargains with the great peace loving nations that now confront it. Germany knows precisely how it will go about getting these benefits, how it will play one nation against another.

Germany is playing a desperate game which it cannot possibly win unless it can fool the great democracies into accepting ruinous terms of peace.

If all advertising today were confined to plain type text, without any illustrations, how dull and monotonous it would seem. How could it possibly be as attractive and interesting as the pictured announcements we are so accustomed to, even with the most attractive and convincing type effects? Yet it must be borne in mind that illustrated advertising is, so to speak, an innovation. "Art" in advertising is of comparatively recent growth but its growth has been rapid, and its adoption almost universal.

BROADENS HIS REQUEST

SECRETARY DANIELS has broadened his request that newspapers print no details concerning the movement of ships. By his request on July 6, '18, they were asked to refrain from mentioning the sailing, location or supposed location of any ship in American water. Experience, he states, has demonstrated the fact that the request should not have been limited to "American waters," but should have included "or in other waters."

The declaration of war by the Bolshevik government upon the allies, at least opens the way for the allies to go into that country. Lenin seems to be getting into deeper water all the time.

One can hardly be blamed for thinking the crown prince has more skill for rolling cigarettes than in leading an army.

A mother thinks it queer her daughter should care for the things she never cared for herself.

The old boys registered in September can be sent over to take care of the Bolsheviks. The job should be to their liking.

Umatilla county's harvest may be said to be started on the last lap, and there will be enough labor to take care of all the crops.

Of course Umatilla county will do her part to help the Salvation Army.

28 YEARS AGO

(From the East Oregonian, August 10, 1890.)

L. G. Frazier, H. J. Stillman, A. E. Dart, Len Shaw and James Carden, were out near "Deadman's Hill" on the reservation Sunday shooting birds. Eleven grouse, eight pheasants and two prairie chickens were bagged by the party.

J. M. Bentley left for Weston this morning to adjust a loss caused by the burning of a school building near there.

Miss May Woodbury, who will occupy a position in the Pendleton public school, arrived in the city Saturday from Harrisburg. She is the guest of her cousin, E. V. Horton.

Miss Jennie Crystal of Spokane, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. B. Roy of Pendleton.

81 Per Cent Wounded Soldiers Recover and Are Returned to Lines

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Only 4 1-2 per cent of all men sent to the hospital as a result of wounds received in action, die from wounds. Chief of Staff General Peyton C. March announced today.

Fully 81 per cent of the men sent to the hospitals for treatment return to duty, many of them in less than two months, he explained.

Of the total sent to hospitals only 14 1-2 per cent are discharged from the service for physical disabilities. These figures, he said, were based on the official casualty figures of the British and the French while Americans were brigaded with them.

The official figures made public by Gen. March are:

"Returned to service 81 per cent or 816 out of every 1,000.

Discharged from service 14 1-2 per cent or 145 out of every 1,000.

"Deaths from wounds 4 1-2 per cent, or 145 out of every 1,000.

Digitalis Demand Grows

TOLEDO, Or., Aug. 10.—J. Ragsdale, who operates a digitalis dryer on the Alsea river, yesterday said there has been a big demand for his product, and is experiencing difficulty in filling orders on account of the scarcity of pickers. Mr. Ragsdale said a hop dryer has exploded and the idea that the leaves of digitalis must be dried slowly in the shade.

EIGHT ITALIANS ESCAPE AUSTRIAN PRISON CAMPS

Thrilling Tale Told of Long Suffering and Flight Through Russia.

(Special Correspondence of the Italian American News Bureau, Chicago.)

LONDON, July 19.—The most thrilling escape of prisoners since the great war began was effected without doubt by eight Italians now in London, who got away from an Austrian concentration camp after eighteen months of suffering. They were Corporal Giovanni Castellani and Privates Stefano Vanni, Giovanni Armando, Leonardo Tesati, Silvio Ricci, Guglielmo Manuella, Felice Aris and Evaristo Parenti.

I met them soon after their arrival in London in a small restaurant where they were guests of the proprietor. Danni told me in French how they had reached London after ninety days of travel, partly afoot and partly by rail. He said life in the camp was intolerable from the first, and they lost no time in plotting an escape.

"We decided death would be preferable to life in such circumstances," Danni asserted, "and agreed to commit suicide or burst our hearts if we lacked the weapons necessary."

"We were kept like cattle, with damp straw for bedding and rats for company at night. Our working hours were sixteen for each of the seven days. Our food was the poorest black bread and a nauseating substitute for coffee. Only excruciating hunger at last enabled us to partake of either."

"Whipped When They Lagged."

"Every soldier had his own allotted task. Each one was watched by a soldier with a whip, ready to apply it at the slightest provocation, and wanting that he used it as a diabolical amusement. The Austrian officers descended to the level of spitting on the Italians, kicking them with their heavy boots, and laughing at their groans or protests."

"Once an Italian soldier after being subjected to all these tortures and practical jokes, struck the officer a heavy blow in the face which sent him reeling to the ground senseless. The chastisement of the soldier was horrible. He was triced up for three days so that he could not move, but that was the least of it. When he was freed he fell helples like a log, but blows soon restored him."

"It was marvelous that we succeeded in escaping the vigilance of the sentinels close to the camp and spread around it for a long distance. We walked across Bessarabia, the province of Podolia, and Volynia to Minsk; that is 350 miles."

"A Minsk our shoes were whipped out and our feet benumbed with cold. Every step was torture, but we only thought of freedom. Not knowing where we were, we kept pushing on rapidly. We dug under the snow and found radishes which were our food."

"Russian Peasants Hospitable."

"When at last we knew we were in Russia," Danni continued, "we asked the peasants for food and found them hospitable, but their supplies were scant. One day, however, an aged man offered us some vodka which he kept hidden away in his cabin. We shall remember him gratefully for that to our dying day."

"There were trains enough from Minsk to Petrograd. They moved slowly, however, and for the greater part were filled with soldiers. Just outside Minsk we eight fugitives leaped aboard the first one passing as best we could. The Russian soldiers welcomed us cheerily, and listened to our story. It developed that two of the Italians were on the trucks of the last car. All were two days without food."

"Fifty days after we left the Austrian camp we reached Petrograd."

hungry, dirty, and in rags. The Italian consul looked after us and clothed us and after three days we set out again for home."

Raw Bear Meat Proves Delicacy.

At this point in the narrative one of the others whispered in Danni's ear that he had forgotten something. Danni began again:

"I forgot to say that in a Russian village an old man joined us and handed me a large knife. We did not understand the meaning of it and could not understand his voluble words. Soon we saw his purpose. His acts exemplified themselves. Crossing the snow we heard a strange groan. Going toward it we found a bear cub, no larger than a lamb. It was mild and although hunger was urging, we felt a touch of remorse at the thought of killing it."

"Moreover we had no wood and no matches to start a fire. Then we saw what the old man had in mind. He asked us to eat the raw flesh of the little bear. We found it tender and delicious and it proved a real feast."

"Not once during our long tramp did we have matches with which to make a fire. Only once or twice in the peasants' huts were we able to smoke. They had no matches and did not need them for they kept a fire lighted night and day the year round."

"Now and then we found dead birds usually frozen, and ate them greedily when they were not too far decayed. It is amazing what one can endure. Our hardships, however, have left no trace except for the frost bites we shall carry to the grave."

Reach Arctic Seaport.

The eight fugitives had several hundred miles to travel in order to reach the Murman coast of the Arctic ocean. The railroads were choked with freight and demoralized. It was necessary to walk, and the days were short. Several times they lost their way, but were set right by the aurora borealis.

It grew steadily colder. There were heavy snows. The eight Italians dug their own shelter every night in the snow before they slept. Ice quenched their thirst and snow furnished heat.

They took hold of hands and each one resting his head on his next companion they helped each other along in turn. It was a chain of men, worn out and exhausted which dragged itself through that dreary wilderness. They were sustained by the hope of living again in their beloved country. When their spirits waned they sang the Hymn of Garibaldi.

"On the twenty-fifth day of their pilgrimage they reached the Arctic seaport of Muran. There they received a hospitable welcome. The British, a steamship taken by the Huns, sent them to Newcastle, where they received attention from the Italian ambassador in London."

French General Pays Tribute to Rainbows

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—A glowing tribute to the 42d (Rainbow) Division of the American Army on its departure from the Borraine front is paid by Gen. Duport, commanding the French 6th Army Corps, in the following general orders:

"The commanding general of the 6th Army Corps expresses his deepest gratitude to the 42d Division for its precious collaboration; he particularly thanks the distinguished commander of this division, Gen. Menoher, the officers under his orders, and his staff so brilliantly directed by Col. MacArthur."

"It is with a sincere regret that the entire 6th Army Corps sees the 42d Division depart. But the bonds of affectionate comradeship which have been formed here will not be broken; for us, in faithful memory, are united the living and the dead of the Rainbow Division, those who are leaving for hard combats and those who, after having nobly sacrificed their lives on the land of the east, now rest there, guarded ever piously by friends.

"These sentiments of warm esteem will be more deeply affirmed during the impending struggles where the fate of free peoples is to be decided. 'May our units, side by side, contribute valiantly to the triumph of justice and right.'"

Lands to Be Reclaimed.

YAKIMA, Aug. 19.—Reclamation officials are assembling a crew for work on the reconstruction of the Tilton canal, where $25,000 is to be spent there, guarded ever piously by friends.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—Lut Cecil announced that William Lockhart, British agent at Moscow was arrested by the bolsheviks.

Start Tomorrow and Keep It Up Every Morning

Get in the habit of drinking a glass of hot water before breakfast.

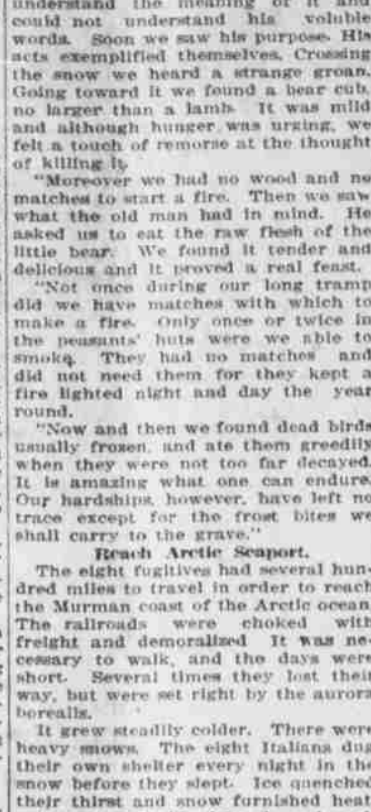

We're not here long so let's make our stay agreeable. Let us live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, and look well. What a glorious condition to attain and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of inside-bathing before breakfast.
