SOCIAL AND PERSONALS

who are within range of their guns. Here is an interesting editorial on the subject by the Boston Post:

Men still youthful can remember very well the shudders of fear that went through some of our good citizens hereabout when, at the outbreak of the Spanish war, rumors of the certain approach of Admiral Cervera's fleet spread through the community. Some very conservative persons even took their bonds and silverware out of safety vaults here in Boston and sent them off to Worcester for security's sake. Others gave up their summer homes. Others prepared themselves with tickets for flight inland at the first sign of the enemy.

That was only 20 years ago. But now, even with the sure knowledge of the presence of German submarines off our shores, even with the reports of their attacks becoming almost daily reading, the people of our coast are absolutely calm. They realize the damage that the U-boats can do; but they are not alarmed at it. The panic that Germany hoped to instill into the hearts of the Americans along the coast is non-existent.

What makes the change? Our people of 1918 were as courageous as any those of 1918, undoubtedly. The only reasonable explanation is that in four years of war, with the Germans doing everything possible in the way of outrages, we have all become used to any manifestation of hostility. We set our teeth together now and defy the Hun to do his worst. "Scars" have no longer a place in human daily activities.

The kaiser may as well call his submarines home. They are afraid to fight a ship that amounts to anything and for purposes of terrorism they have lost their punch.

A wireless message says Lening was wounded by an assassin; let it be hoped the assassin was a good shot.

Summer has gotten by without much effort and we are now to face Miss Autumn, the most beautiful girl on the eastern Oregon calendar.

Dell Blacett did not wait until the war was over; why should Pendleton delay about honoring his memory?

It was a mean advantage to take of the China pheasant who thought we were their friends.

He Just Needed $10,000 So He Drew it From Bank

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—A tall, well-dressed young man, carrying a small suitcase, entered the Atlantic National Bank, Broadway and Warren St., by way of the employees' entrance, walked into the paying teller's cage, opened his suitcase and monochromatically proceeded to pack it with money. When he had $10,000 tucked away, he closed the bag and walked out.

Chief Clerk C. E. Smith and Joseph Baumel, another clerk, saw the young man as he emerged from the teller's cage. The young man who it was revealed later, was Melvin Kipford, twenty-six years old of Harrisburg, Pa., told the clerks that he was making a study of money and its eccentric habits. Needing some specimens for his laboratory, he had just taken what he thought he would require.

When the clerks attempted to hinder his exit, Kipford drew a revolver and started to run. The clasp on the suitcase became unfastened and $10,000 dropped in the corridor of the bank. Kipford ran down Barclay street to Greenwich, where he was stopped by Traffic Policeman James Smith, who placed him under arrest.

At the police station Kipford said he had stopped at the bank earlier in the day to change a $5 bill, and seeing the money in the teller's cage went out and bought a small suitcase and returned.

SOLDIER SMILES.

You may talk of kings and princes,
 And the glory of their show;
 You may sing of knights and ladies
 In the days of long ago;
 You may paint a vivid picture
 Of the wonder-worlds to see,
 But he smiles on soldier faces
 Look the best of all to me.

They are gassed and shelled and tortured,
 They are muddy, thin and weak;
 They are shocked and shot and shattered,
 And you marvel when they speak;
 They will give their all in battle
 That the world may be made free,
 And their smiles amidst their sorrows
 Are real miracles to see.

Kings and kaisers may be mighty
 As the bloody brutes of war;
 They may use the worst of weapons
 Never dreaming of're better
 But they're sure to meet disaster
 Over land and on the sea,
 For the soldier-boys of Freedom
 Fight—and smile—the whole world free!

—By Captain Allen A. Stockdale, Base Hospital No. 1.

SHOW THEM SOME HONOR NOW

THE East Oregonian's local contemporary objects to the suggestion that Ash street be changed to Blacett street. It contends that Ash street is an obscure street and that it would be better to wait until after the war and then erect a statue in honor of the first Pendleton man to fall on the battlefield.

Ash street was suggested because it leads to the Round-Up entrance and is a street over which all Round-Up traffic must pass. It is paved. At but slight expense a sign or metallic tablet could be placed giving the name of the street and the military record of the man honored. It would be a fitting yet inexpensive way of paying a tribute to a well known Round-Up star who the first from our town, gave up his life on the battlefield.

A plan for a statue would be difficult now or in the near future because of the expense. The bronze alone in a statue of heroic size was quoted at $6000 several years ago. It would cost more now. A suitable statue would cost the city upwards of $10,000. Therefore it would be out of reason in such times as these.

The street naming plan overcomes the objection of expense and permits of immediate action. The boys at the front did not wait when the call of duty came. Why should not Pendleton show them honor while their deeds are fresh in mind and other boys of manly calibre face the foe in the field and trenches?
