PASTIME TODAY.
Miss Dana Presents Spirited Dance. A "conventionalized fandango" in the way Viola Dana describes a dance she does in "The Only Road," a Metro All-Star Series picture which will be presented at the Pastime theater today. Miss Dana is no novice in the art of dancing, as all who have seen her spirited Spanish dance in "The Winding Trail" will doubtless attest. As Nita, in "The Only Road," the tiny star flings her toes about in thorough abandon atop a rough table in a western saloon. The reason she calls her dance a "conventionalized fandango" is because it is a sort of rhythmic potpourri. It is part fandango, part tarantella, part cobra de capello and part Hawaiian hula. In other words, Miss Dana does not do all of the dance with her feet.

COSY TODAY.
At the Cosy today will be shown Eddie Foltz in a chapter of the Bull's Eye, an exciting and thrilling drama. Also will be shown Pearl White in "The House of Hate," that mysterious and creepily play in which is featured the hooded terror, Mack Sennett comedy ends the bill and is called "A Mix Up in Affinities." A good program. Let's go.

Farnum in "True Blue" Bill at Alta. William Farnum in "True Blue" will be the attraction at the Alta theater commencing today. This is a William Fox production and is said to be fully the equal of "Les Miserables." "A Tale of Two Cities" and "When a Man Sees Red."

In "True Blue," Mr. Farnum portrays the part of a western ranch owner—a human, manly man. The story is out of the ordinary and deals with a phase of life new to the cinema.
An English "remittance" man, suddenly becoming possessed of title and estates, deserts his American wife and young son, to return to England to claim his inheritance. He does not take them with him for the reason that he believes he married "beneath his station." This young son grows up on a ranch in the boundless west and becomes the central figure in this drama of life. This character is played by William Farnum. Over in England the titled father, on learning of the death of his American wife, has married again and has another son—a dissipated, profligate young man.
Through a strange series of incidents the half brothers are brought together on the western ranch—one with deep resentment in his heart; the other, weak and unconscious of the relationship, William Farnum, as the strong brother, begins the reformation and regeneration of his weak relative and this accomplished, sends him back to his people in England—a man.
Running through the entire production is one of the sweetest love stories ever produced—a story that brings the half-brothers into apparent rivalry for the hand of a charming young woman.

WILLIAM FARNUM in "TRUE BLUE"

Well, I've just been to see "Bill" Farnum, . . .
The best of the scouts on the screen,
And while I ain't up on play actin'
You kin bet I just "fall for" that scene;

Why, he took me right back to old Tombstone
The days when the town was still new,
When census was black-and-tan tinted,
But all of the gang was "True Blue."

"Bill" Farnum was called "Bob McKeever"—
I sure knew that lad on the range—
He hadn't the same "running brand" then,—
But the ear-marks ain't likely to change.

And Farnum was that breed of fellow—
The pride of the big, breezy West,
With never a streak of the "yellow"
And a big heart hid under his vest.

His Dad turned him loose as a yearlin'
Alone on the range like a stray,
To "go to the bad" with the "rustlers"
But the lad wasn't headed that way.

He stuck like a leech to his mother,
And after he laid her away,
He brought up his "noble" half-brother,
And made the Earl "eat crow" one day.

Now, Bob had first call on the title,
But loved his own homeland the best
He sent the Kid back to Old England,
And struck to his ranch in the West.

Bob "fell for" a pretty young school-marm—
I reckon I'd do the same, too,
The kind that just makes your old heart warm,—
And her eyes, like the play, are "True Blue."

So that's why I "root for" Bill Farnum,—
The best of the scouts on the screen;
And, boys, take a squint at this picture
The best film-play I've ever seen.

Volunteer Army of Women & Children Help to Save the Bumper Wheat Crop in Kansas

Kansas Women Figure in Bloodless, Bulletless Battle to Save the Wheat Crop While Male Harvesters Are Fighting in France.

One of the most romantic battles of the Great War was not fought on the other side of the Atlantic; men had only a part in it, not a shot was fired; the people for whom the battle was fought were half a world away!
Yet this battle was won without the loss of a single life, and with incalculable profit to humanity.
Its objectives were the millions of bushels of wheat from the fruitful acres which are the bread-bosom of Kansas; the fighters who harvested the grain were women, girls, children and men. The enemies were the elements, fire, air and water; the nations for whom the battle was waged were starving Belgium, France, England—all of friendly Europe. In fact—and our own Americans over there.

It will be noticed that the men are mentioned last in the order of battle formation. And that is where they belong. For had it not been for the women and children, a large part of the bumper crop would have rotted on the ground. The depleted ranks of male workers ranks this even in times of peace had not the man power adequately to meet the situation.
There is an element of humor in this story of how the women came to the rescue of Kansas.
When the matrons and the ladies and the "trappers" and the little boys and girls, offered last January to aid in the harvesting this summer, the Kansas War Council declined their proffered help. The thing seemed impossible.

The offer had a far different aspect, a few weeks ago, when the War Council faced the situation of a bumper wheat crop and man power entirely inadequate to handle it.
The fate of the crop hung in the balance.
Then thousands of women—the same women whose January offer of aid had been scorned—with their army of children and girls, sprang up from all over the state, and the wheat crop was saved. If this volunteer army had not, undoubtedly, come to the rescue, a great part of this tremendous crop would have been lost.
