Livestock Trading Stars Quiet After Turkey Holiday

PORTLAND, Nov. 29—Two days run accumulated at North Portland over the holiday, but the showing of supplies was only 15 cars. Killers were rather indifferent about operating during the morning, the usual "day after" feeling being noted in the trade generally. The run of ewine was only fair and early indications were for continued steadiness at former values.

A year ago there was a $16.60 market for top hogs at North Portland, two years ago $9.75.
General hog range:
Prime mixed $16.50 @ 17.00
Medium mixed 16.50 @ 16.75
Rough heavies 14.50 @ 16.00
Pigs 14.00 @ 15.00
Bulk 16.90 @ 17.00

Cattle Situation is Quiet.
Situation in the cattle trade at North Portland was quiet over the holiday, with a small run reported in. Some rather good quality came forward and steady values were generally bid in a limited way.

A year ago North Portland quoted top steers at $10.00; two years ago, $7.15.
General cattle range:
Prime steers $12.25 @ 12.75
Good to choice steers 11.00 @ 12.00
Medium to good steers 10.00 @ 11.00
Fair to medium steers 8.50 @ 9.50
Common to fair steers 6.90 @ 8.00
Choice cows and heifers 8.00 @ 8.50
Medium to good cows and heifers 8.50 @ 7.50
Fair to medium cows and heifers 5.50 @ 6.50
Canners 3.90 @ 4.00
Bulls 5.00 @ 7.50
Calves 9.00 @ 12.00

Mutton Remains Strong.
Mutton market showed scant arrivals over the holiday, and a strong tone continues in the trade, with recent price advances well sustained. One load came in from the interior.

A year ago top lambs sold at $14, while two years ago they stood at $9.00.
General sheep and lamb range:
Prime lambs $11.50 @ 12.75

FAILURE AT WEST HERO AT FISMES

Lieutenant, Short on Math, Leads Battalion.

(Stars and Stripes.)
A man who was completely flunked out of West Point was graduated summa cum laude on the River Vesle. Born of army folks and raised as a youngster in a long succession of army posts, he had seemed destined from the cradle for high command, but at the stiff school on the Hudson he developed such vagaries in mathematics that he was sent on his way. Then for a time it seemed as though the army would see him no more. Just about then, however, America mobilized on the Mexican border, and the ex-West Pointer appeared on the Rio Grande as a private. By the time his outfit reached Fismes, he was a lieutenant.
Beyond Fismes lay Fismettes, the part of Fismes that lies across the river. It used to be reached by an arched bridge of stone and concrete, but retreating Germans blew that to fragments and it is on the rough rubble ford which these fragments make that you cross the river now. The turning of Fismettes into an American bridgehead on the northern bank of the Vesle was an exploit carried out through a violent storm from the massed machine guns of the enemy, so that the river there looked for a time like the most lurid lithographs of war that imagination ever conceived.
In Charge of the Runners.
When the hour came to create that bridgehead, our ex-West Pointer's battalion lay in support of Fismes and below. So he volunteered his services to the battalion that was to lead the way across the river and the major put him in charge of the runners. He had five runners in Fismettes and five in Fismes to relay the tidings to the rear. Their path was perilous beyond description, and there came a time when an important message was thrust over to him and there was no runner left to carry it. Of the five in Fismettes, two had been killed and three badly hurt. The lieutenant carried the message himself, that one and several more, making trip after trip through the rain of shells and the easy fire from machine guns, carrying the word across the Fismes, never making the return trip empty-handed. Usually he came back with hardly needed letters.
He came out of the fight unscathed, but not unscathed. All along the line from Fismes southwards, you could hear the song:
Turkey in Europe may look to certain runners' nations like "a little of the white neck."
