What the Picture Theaters Have to Tell You.

ALTA SUNDAY-MONDAY.

Delightful Mae Marsh Stars in "Money Mad."

Although she has everything to make a girl happy, Elsie Dean is miserable because of her distrust of her stepfather, Martin Ross. When she returns from school and finds him surrounded by objectionable people, the girl cannot forget the strange illness which overcame her mother and resulted in her death and the presence then, as now, of a sinister Hindu in the house. Ostensibly a servant, Sima dominates Martin Ross through the latter's weakness for things occult. And there is Fanette Lisbon.

She is a beautiful creature of doubtful reputation whose desire is to marry the wealthy man and get possession of the splendid pearls left by Elsie's mother for the girl.

Prompted by her sweetheart, Elsie asks Martin Ross for the treasures and is delighted to receive them promptly. At once Elsie and Billy Glavin have the pearls appraised and both are shocked to learn that they are of little value. Elsie is sure that she has been tricked and conceives a plan that shall unmask Martin Ross and his questionable friends.

Arrayed in the costume of an Oriental seeress, Elsie awaits the coming of Fanette, who is lured by Elsie's stories of a wonderful fortune-teller. Fanette's visit is followed by a call from Ross, who is alarmed at what Elsie tells him about the impending fate of the pearls.

He hurries to see if they are safe and their hiding place is revealed to Fanette, who shoots Ross when he attempts to regain possession of them. Cunningly she fastens the guilt on Elsie's sweetheart and makes off with the pearls.

Again Elsie has recourse to her trick and under her skillful probing Fanette discloses the hiding place. Detectives seize her and bring Sima, the Hindu, to justice as well.

PASTIME SUNDAY-MONDAY.

"The Danger Mark" Was Photographed by Sunny Florida.

When the admirers of beautiful Elsie Ferguson, the famous Artercraft star, see her in her newest photoplay, "The Danger Mark," a picturization of Robert W. Chambers' celebrated novel at the Pastime Sunday and Monday they will see some charming Florida scenery, nearly every scene in the picture having been photographed in that state.

One of the scenes of "The Danger Mark" is a garden party and when this was being photographed in the garden of a splendid mansion at Mayport, Fla., scenes of society took prominent in New York society and elsewhere, took part therein. The costumes worn in this picture represent a fortune. Miss Ferguson will be seen in this picture as Gerald Seagrave, a charming young society woman who has inherited an inheritance desire to drink from a dissipated ancestor. She is wealthy and much courted, and when her guardian discovers that the girl secretly indulges her craving by eating sugar steeped in cologne, she is shocked and terrified. At a Louis XVI garden fete, Geraldine drinks champagne to excess, but she escapes consequent disgrace when the man who loves her carries her to her room the other guests being quite unaware of their young host's predicament.

Miss Ferguson portrays this difficult role with discretion, taste and skill. Her emotional scenes are described as being most artistic and they lend much charm and interest to a most captivating story. The love interest is exceptionally strong and this is perhaps the chief charm of the photoplay. Miss Ferguson is capably supported by an excellent company.

ESPIONAGE MUST STILL BE WATCHED

Danger of Foe Propaganda as Great as Before Armistice.

SEATTLE, Nov. 29.—Declaring the need for protecting the army against espionage and for watchfulness against enemy propaganda to be as great now as before the armistice was signed on the battlefield, federal officers have issued a warning against any relaxation of effort here.

This view is expressed by Immigration Commissioner Henry F. White, who now is holding hundreds of enemy aliens, including large numbers of I. W. W., for deportation, and by United States Attorney Robert C. Saunders. A list of names has been taken in Washington, D. C., both by T. W. Gregory, United States attorney general, and A. Bruce Bielaski, chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the department of justice.

War Period Not Ended. Assistant Attorney General Beames pointed out that all of the espionage laws of major importance are based on the duration of the war. So far as aliens and enemies of the government are concerned, he declared the department of justice, as well as the minute men, must and will act until the treaty of peace has been ratified and the United States no longer officially is at war.

"It has come to the attention of this department," Immigration Commissioner White said, "that numbers of Seattle citizens, including those holding membership in the American Protective League, are of the opinion that, with the armistice signed, the need for their services has passed. In view of the present situation this feeling is indeed unfortunate because the requirements of the moment are urgent and the need for organized effort against espionage and propaganda is great."

Commissioner White is one of the federal directors in Seattle of the minute men division.

Federal officials in Seattle have received a letter from Chief Bielaski of the Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, at Washington, in which he says there is now every reason for watchfulness. His letter says in part:

Keep Up Watchfulness.

The need for the American Protective League is as great now as it has been in the past and I am entirely satisfied that the need for this organization will continue for some time to come entirely without regard to the progress of peace negotiations. The tremendous machinery which have been organized by the government for the prosecution of this war cannot be stopped abruptly and must continue to operate for many months under any circumstances.
