Anxious to Get Back to Pendleton.

Earl 3. B. Newquitast, a Umatilla county man in the navy, is on the U.S. S. Melville, flagship of the destroyer flotilla with base at Queenstown Ireland, one of the nearest points of land to the scene of the sinking of the Lusitania. In a letter to M. R. Chessman he encloses postcards showing the destroyers with depth charges on deck, also a captured Ger-man nine. Newquist has been on the other side since June, and like all others writing is anxious to get back to Pendleton, which he says is the best place he has seen yet.
