WHILE GLOWS ONE STAR
 While glows one lone, bright star
 In night-veiled sky,
 Hearts will not want in faith,
 Dreams will not die.
 While blooms a lone red rose
 Mid thistle and weed,
 The soul will wake to song,
 And noble deed.
 And while 'mid hosts of slaves
 One heart is free
 Celestial music will cleave the sky
 With psalm of liberty.
 —Fred Guido, F. A. Stars and Stripes.

JOHN BARLEYCORN DID IT HIMSELF

THE New York World, which newspaper has been extremely peeved by the adoption of nationwide prohibition, has been trying to find out how it all came about. After a study of the Anti-Saloon League and its work the conclusion is reached that the nation is dry because of the efforts of churches and the use of money. But the World overlooks

MEDICINES USED BY MONKS

It is claimed that Monks of ancient days knew of more than three hundred species of medicinal plants used in general for medicines by these religious orders. While centuries have passed, with all the advance made in medical science, many of our most successful remedies are today made from the roots and herbs of the field, like that good, old-fashioned remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for more than forty years has been relieving women from some of the worst forms of female ills, and is now considered the standard remedy.

King Alcohol. It was his influence that clinched the issue when it was being decided in most of the state. People had seen the effects of liquor. The sight was antagonistic to the spirit of an age that calls for efficiency and advancement. People grew weary of a thing that dragged men down and then mocked them in their misery. When they awakened to the facts they took such action as was to be expected.

The Anti-Saloon League and the churches did much to awaken the public. They are entitled to credit for their zeal. But they could not have succeeded had they not had the facts on their side and the facts were supplied by John Barleycorn.

DON'T BLAME THE MIRROR

THE press is often called a world mirror and the term is appropriate. Newspapers reflect in the best way they can the news of the day, gathered from the best available sources and with an aim at truthfulness and accuracy. Naturally there will always be chances of error; always news that will displease someone or perhaps many people. But the newspaper is not to blame for that. If it recites the facts as it finds them truthfully and with fairness it has done its part. It is as futile to complain at a newspaper over the character of a news story, provided it is fairly given, as it would be for one to blame a mirror if what you see therein is discouraging.

PREVENTIVES OF IMMORALITY

A study of considerably more than a thousand cases of delinquency and immorality has been made by investigators under the direction of the Morals court. Each case is presumed to have been carefully inquired into by the presiding judge, so that the data finally available to the statistician have real scientific value. Certain conclusions of the report submitted, although neither startling nor novel, have distinct value for the city and the state. Judge Dolan points out, for instance, that few of the girls arrested and tried for criminal immorality had graduated from a high school. A large number of them never went higher than the fourth grade of the elementary school. Only one woman of the total number was a college graduate.

Certainly these figures demonstrate that education, liberal and vocational, is a preventive of delinquency and immorality. It is often argued that education of the mind does not tend to elevate character. This is true in a sense, but the fact should not be overlooked that education means opportunity, better pay, better surroundings, better friends and acquaintances, and therefore, less temptation. Education of the intellect should be accomplished, by all means, by education of the hand as well as of the emotions and the will. Still, for practical social purposes even the limited education given by the ordinary common school and the high school is a great factor in safeguarding order and morality.

Drink, evil associations, the unregulated dance hall are also shown to be prolific breeders of vice and delinquency. Juvenile and other protective leagues have stressed these facts again and again in their annual reports, but the Morals court study, based on 1,072 actual cases, is calculated to drive the lessons home more effectively.—Chicago News.

Henry L. Pittock had the rare experience of seeing Portland grow from a mere village into a modern city and of developing a newspaper property from a one man weekly into a successful daily of nationwide repute. He had in addition the good fortune of living to a ripe age and of being able to enjoy the fruits of his long years of labor. He seems to have made it a habit to keep young and active. It is the way to live. There is satisfaction in the fact Mr. Pittock did not die until he had lived a long, full life.

No individual is expecting to enjoy pre war prices during the next year but the legislative ways and means committee seems to think the Eastern Oregon State Hospital can be operated on such a basis. It is what we may expect though when we try to make a growing state wear a cast iron shoe in the form of the six per cent tax limitation.

Farmers Get Big Loans

SALT LAKE CITY, Jan. 29.—The state board of land commissioners of Utah has advanced a total of $1,972,022 to 544 Utah farmers during the last two years, according to the biennial report of Arthur Kuhn, secretary of the board. The report's figures show this to be an average loan of $3625 on each farm. Increase in the interest account income during the second year of the biennium is shown to be $45,954.99 over the second year of the previous biennium.
