RAILBIRDS, MOST UNPOPULAR OF PESTS, RULED OFF TRACK AT CHURCHILL DOWNS, BUT DON'T GO

The railbirds are on the job at Churchill Downs, where the forty-fifth annual Kentucky Derby will be run May 10.

The railbirds time the tryouts of the three-year-olds eligible for the historic classic. If one of the runners, little known, slips off a fast three-eighths the railbird's job is to flash the information to the big gamblers. The racing association has ruled against the railbirds. But the railbirds still hold forth and as a result of their time-catching the names of Eternal, St. Barton, St. Bernard and Billy Kelly already stand forth prominently among the eligibles for this year's meet.
