EARLY DAY FLIGHT OF ITALIAN PRECIPITATED SERIES OF DISASTERS

Southern Aircraftmen Pioneers in Sensational Flying.

LONDON, May 29.—The activity of Italian Caproni aircraft has won the sincere admiration of the allied flyers. In the immense theater of war and progress of Italian aviation perhaps has not received all the recognition it deserves. At a future time when the history of the war is told calmly in facts and figures which cannot be revealed today, the work of Italian aircraft inventors, builders and flyers will furnish one of the most striking chapters about the contributors to victory.

The flight of Captain Laureati from Turin to London in five hours drew the attention of the British public to this branch of Italy's manifold war activities.

Balloon flight over London in 1875. The British public has a traditional admiration for Italian prowess in the air, because here it is still vividly recalled—after more than a century—what an impression Count Zambecari, the first aeronaut in England, made when he ascended over London in 1783, with another Italian, Vincenzo Lunardi. The event was one of the most sensational happenings of the close of the eighteenth century.

In November, 1783, Count Zambecari built a balloon of kid, three meters in diameter and weighing only five kilos and a half (twelve pounds). The balloon was shown in public for several days. On the 12th it was three-quarters filled with hydrogen gas, which had been discovered 13 years before by Cavendish, an English chemist. The balloon went up more than 3000 feet and floated in the air for three hours. That was the first balloon ascension in England.

The right bed invites perfect relaxation. It stands firmly. Its corners look tight. Push it or pull it by one corner and it moves as one piece—not a rattles, a shake, a lurch, a suspension of steadiness.

The right spring gives gently to the contour, but supports the body in a firm elastic foundation for the mattress. It does not sag or hump. It fits squarely on the bed.

Week in Stock Market Sees Values Forced Down

PORTLAND, June 2.—Total of 156 carloads of livestock entered the North Portland yards during the six days compared with 153 last week, 115 the previous week, 119 four weeks ago and 129 a year ago.

Liberal increase in cattle run was shown for the week and this is clearly reflected in the trend of the trade and the prices obtained by shippers.
