MASSACRE SCENE BECAME REALITY

PORTLAND, June 3.—Because he presented a good target for the execution of a "merry little jest" indulged in by one of his companions in art, Leland Tubbs, 23, an actor in "Martyrs of Yesterday," being filmed by the American Lifeograph company at Baker bridge, Clackamas county, is at the Sellwood hospital with a deep wound in the fleshy part of his thigh and severe powder burns. Tubbs barely escaped with his life on Sunday afternoon when a companion fired a blank cartridge from close range in a "spirit of play."
A wise and provident property man, who equipped his actors with blanks, may have prevented fatal injury. The property man even removed a blank from the rifle, and the gun with which Tubbs was injured was thought to be unloaded. How the bullet got into the gun, or how he happened to pull the trigger are "mysteries" to the young man who fired the weapon. Employees of the film company at the studio this morning refused to reveal the name of the person who fired the shot.
After rehearsing a scene of the replica of the Whitman massacre, a

"Cave Man" May Live Forty Years in Jail for Stealing Woman

NEW YORK, June 4.—The penalty for forcibly throwing a beautiful woman into a taxi cab in Brooklyn and carrying her to his apartment in Manhattan may be forty years in prison. That sort of thing isn't done in polite society—especially when the woman is clad only in a filmy nightie. John E. Carey, manufacturer of surgical instruments, whom the public knows as the "cave man" who bore off Mrs. Helen C. Waterman, a beautiful widow, without allowing her time even to change from her nightie to street clothing, was indicted Thursday on three counts in Brooklyn.
The indictment accused him as a second offender, as it was discovered he had been convicted of punishing a business associate some time ago. As a second offender he may be sentenced for forty years for his escapade with Mrs. Waterman if convicted.
Detectives found the young widow in Carey's apartment the next day, still clad only in her robe de nuit.
