

Strictly One Price To All

AND THAT THE LOWEST POSSIBLE, QUALITY CONSIDERED. The store that has more than one price is like a grasshopper in the field—YOU CAN'T TELL WHERE IT'S GOING TO JUMP. You simply take a gambler's chance in guessing. WE HAVE NO GUESSING AT PRICES HERE. We have but one price and that's the same to all, and it's plainly marked on every article. When you buy here you get the best for the price, no matter what the price.

All the New Styles in Petticoats Are Gathered Here

They come in so many beautiful colors and so many stunning styles that to attempt to give you an idea of them here with words would be out of the question—we would fail in the effort. You will have to see them to appreciate them and the many little points of beauty they embody which our pen can't tell you about. Taffeta, Crepe de Chines, Wash Satins, etc., make up the showing. They are priced from $3.75 to $14.75

DOCTOR GOES TO TRIAL FOR DEATH OF WIFE

MINEOLA, N. Y., June 10.—(United Press.)—Dr. Walter Keen Wilkins, 47 years old, faced trial in Nassau county court today for the murder of his wife, Julia, at their Long Beach home on February 27th, last.
Intense interest was manifested in the outcome of the case, which will be tried in the same court room in which Mrs. Jacques Lebouly, and Mrs. Panca De Sautiers, faced a judge and jury charged with the murder of their husbands. Both were acquitted.
Many peculiar circumstances surrounded Mrs. Wilkins' murder. Dr. Wilkins' story was that he returned to their summer home at Long Beach from New York City. Opening the door, the doctor said he was struck on the head with a blunt instrument. Three men then grabbed Mrs. Wilkins and struck her several times on the head. She died within an hour. Dr. Wilkins told the story to the police, and while the three men were being hunted Wilkins disappeared. For several days the police instituted a country-wide search, without finding any trace of the physician.
Then it was reported that he had been seen in Baltimore. While drests were searching that city, the aged doctor was recognized in the Pennsylvania station, New York, despite the fact he had shaved off his mutton-chop whiskers and otherwise changed his appearance. He made no attempt to deny his identity, said he was on his way to surrender to the police and was immediately taken into custody. An indictment charging murder in the first degree was found and he has since been in the county jail here, awaiting trial.

"My wife and I have lived in complete harmony," he declared. "We were always very happy; it's an outrage that such a charge should be brought against me."

DAVE HILL TAKES QUEST FOR REAL SUNDAY JOY RIDE

Plucked from death in the fourth reel after flirting with the undertaker for veritable eons, Dr. and Mrs. David B. Hill, accompanied by their guest, Verne Hardin Porter, writer and magazine editor, and also James Hill, Jr., and Freddie Hill, and Tumbler, the dog, and what remained of their sunken spirits, returned from Blingham Springs Sunday night.
Mr. Porter, en route to New York to become associate editor of the Hearst magazine group, had never driven a Ford until Sunday. So, at his earnest solicitation, Dr. Hill, plucked to action by accusations of his being too proud to ride in a flivver, broke the lock on his brother Jim's garage, and removed therefrom one consumptive, complaining Ford truck.

Mrs. Hill and Mr. Porter were the enthusiasts. They wanted the occasion to be large and ostentatious. Little James and Freddie were ensconced in the tonneau with food, pillows and other accoutrements. Mr. Porter insisted that the dog be brought along to fill out the party, because he howled so wittily.
Dr. Hill suffered from grave qualms. He muttered over the state of health of this particular Ford truck. First, said he, the tires looked poked, especially the left lower molar. Then he shook his head gloomily over the fact that the engine hit on only one cylinder. Each time, however, he was assured of an overplus of pride.
The excursion got under way with glad, blithesome cries, except that Dr. Hill was glumly silent, attired in overalls, goggles and gauntlets, with pockets filled with wrenches, string, wires and mysterious packages known only to Ford mechanics. As Rolls-Royce and Renaults were passed on the road, Mr. Porter and Mrs. Hill chorused in with the boys and the dog in yells of derision, and the Ford truck rambled until—
However, the many different reports agree that there was some difficulty on the hills. The truck preferred to back down. Mr. Porter was elected to crank. Mrs. Hill elected herself to walk.
At last it stopped. The engine buzzed mirthfully, but the wheels did not stir. Eighteen or 20 cars were stopped. Then the truck decided to run again. "Say," remarked Dr. Hill, "she's just getting warmed up."
Then it stopped for all time, in the middle of the narrowest part of the road. Every motorist who passed claimed to be a Ford expert, but each shook his head over this particular one. Mrs. Hill went to sleep. The boys and the dog went in wading. Mr. Porter wandered away. The blithe, gladsome cries ceased. Lunch ran out.
Dr. Hill decided to repair the truck, muttering many I-told-you-soes. He disappeared for a time and returned with a sledge-hammer, a stick of wood and some baling wire. A large and enthusiastic crowd collected. Several trees were broken down and their trunks "ashed in the truck's" "innards."

Dr. Hill survived the job with grinning satisfaction, sat back on his haunches, and prophesied to the crowd.
"Now," quoth he, "she can't help going."
The crowd cheered. There was a smash and a bang, the tree trunk broke, but the truck stood placid and inanimate.
"Might 'a' known it," mourned Dr. Hill. "C'mon. Lets go."
So tired, dusty, bruised, bumped, chafested in spirit, the party rented the first car that was rentable, and wound its funeral way to the Springs. W. Schwartzberg and his family dumped them into their car and brought them to Pendleton. They said not a word. Once the dog started to yip, but Dr. Hill grabbed his muzzle.
"Too much," said he, "is too much."
And he put everyone, including his guest, to bed at seven-thirty. And Sunday was his birthday.

Plays, Without Woman Character, 107 Times

PARIS, June 10.—Sucha Guitly's play, "Pasteur," in which no woman's character appeared, has had a run of 107 performances, which, for a play entirely devoid of feminine interest is considered in Paris to have been a great success. The piece, however, hardly had claims to be a play. It was rather a series of unconnected scenes in the life of the great scientist, beginning with one showing him with his pupils at the outbreak of the war of 1870, continuing with scenes introducing his first application of his vaccination against hydrophobia and ending with his reception at the French academy.
The absence of any woman's role was not the only remarkable feature of the piece. The "hero" has not been dead 12 years yet, so that many who saw the play remembered his personality.

MINE CLOSES; HOG FARM IS TOO NEAR

ST. LOUIS, June 10.—Eighty-five miners and five topmen were thrown out of work yesterday when Mine #2, owned by George Granger of the New National Coal Co., ordered the mine closed because of the odor from the Gravelly Valley Hog Farm, near Belleville, which is sucked down into the mine by the fan in the ventilating shaft. A mine committee composed of Granger, Charles Gibbons and John Hurbet was named to consult an attorney with a view to instituting suit against Guy W. Caron, the head of the company operating the hog farm, for damages for time lost by the men. State Mine Inspector Thomas Wright has posted a notice at the mine which forbids three blocks from the hog farm, that the men are not to be permitted to go down if the odor from the farm penetrates the mine.
Steps to restrain the company from operating the farm are to be taken by the City of Belleville in injunction proceedings which will be filed shortly. There are from 4000 to 5000 hogs at the farm, a half mile south of Belleville, where St. Louis garbage is fed.

If the greater amphitryonic council in Versailles succeeds in pleasing a majority of its members, it will do more than the original was able to accomplish.
"Are you in favor of government ownership?"
"I don't," remarked the hesitating man. "Sometimes I am. And then again sometimes I think the government has trouble enough as it is."
