One hundred cities are now cooperating in the Own Your Own Home campaign of the United States Department of Labor. This campaign, begun three months ago, has spread steadily until every State in the Union has been reached. In addition to the cities in which the Own Your Own Home movement has been well started, there are nearly 400 that are preparing to stimulate building systematically.

For the purpose of conducting the Own Your Own Home campaign in the most thorough manner the country has been divided into 19 districts, with a regional director for each district. In promoting the campaign the purpose is, first, to remedy housing shortages where such conditions actual exist; second, to collect all possible information on present conditions affecting building; and, third, to stimulate the home-ownership idea, not spasmodically, but so it may become a permanent part of the communities.

Paul C. Murphy, 276 1-2 Stark street, Portland, Oregon, is regional director of the campaign for Oregon, Washington and Idaho. Albany and Portland are two Oregon towns listed as being active in the campaign and Spokane is leading Washington cities.

G. I. LaDow has been awarded the contract for the erection of a modern dwelling for J. W. Standard Oil Work Nearly Done.
The plumbing work on the new office and garage for the local branch of the Standard Oil Co. has been virtually completed by C. P. Miller who had the contract for the work. The erection of the warehouse, office, garage and ten storage tanks is also nearly completed, the new additions having cost in the neighborhood of $40,000.

Building Slow; Repairs Fairly Heavy
The impetus in new home building, which has grown to the largest proportions the city has known, took a light slump with the opening of June and to date but two new residences have been announced locally. One of these is being built by J. A. Horn and the other by J. W. Embusk. Repairs are taking up most of the permits issued by City Recorder Fitz Gerald.
