THE LEAGUE COVENANT

THE AUTHORS OF THESE ARTICLES:

William H. Taft, ex-President of the United States.
George W. Wickersham, formerly U. S. Atty. General.
A. Lawrence Lowell, President Harvard University.
Henry W. Taft, of the New York Bar.

THE PURPOSE:

To discuss and make clear the various articles of the Paris Covenant for a League of Nations, now awaiting ratification by the United States Senate.

Today's Letter Takes Up

LABOR
The labor article in the original Covenant (Article XX) merely bound the parties to the establishment, as a part of the League organization, of a permanent Bureau of Labor, in furtherance of an effort to secure, and maintain fair and humane conditions of labor in the countries of the League and those with which they should have commercial and industrial relations.

Before the revised Covenant was adopted the commission on International Labor Legislation, appointed by the Peace Conference, had submitted a report recommending the establishment by the League of a permanent organization for the promotion of international regulation of labor conditions. With that in view, there was substituted for Article XX a new Article XXIII, reading as follows:

"Subject to and in accordance with the provisions of international conventions existing or hereafter to be agreed upon, the members of the league (a) will endeavor to secure and maintain fair and humane conditions of labor for men, women and children both in their own countries and in all countries to which their commercial and industrial relations extend, and for that purpose will establish and maintain the necessary international organizations; (b) undertake to secure just treatment of the native inhabitants of territories under their control; (c) will intrust the league with the general supervision over the execution of agreements with regard to the traffic in opium and other dangerous drugs; (d) will intrust the league with the general supervision of the trade in arms and ammunition with the countries in which the control of this traffic is necessary in the common interest; (e) will make provision to secure and maintain freedom of communication and of transit and equitable treatment for the commerce of all members of the league. In this connection the special necessities of the regions designated during the war of 1914-1918 shall be in mind; (f) will endeavor to take steps in matters of international concern for the prevention and control of diseases."

World Labor Convention
The proposed International Labor Convention which is to be a part of the treaty of peace, a supplement to the League Covenant, seeks to accomplish the objects recited in Article XXIII through the medium of a permanent organization, which shall consist of a General Conference of the representatives of the respective powers and an International Labor Council. The General Conference is to be composed of representatives of states members of the League, chosen in a somewhat novel manner. Each nation is to have four delegates, two representing its government, one representing employers and the other representing workers in groups. These delegates are to vote individually, not as a national unit. The International Labor Office is to be under the control of a board of twenty-four members, again to be chosen in a novel and complicated manner. Twelve shall be representative of the governments, six shall be elected by the delegates to the Conference representing the employers and six by those representing the working people. Of the twelve government representatives, eight shall be designated by the powers which are of chief industrial importance, and four by the powers selected for that purpose by the governmental delegates to the Conference, excluding the delegates of the above mentioned states. No one of the parties, together with its dominions and colonies, shall be entitled to nominate more than one member of the governing body of the International Labor Office.

Information Clearing House
The International Labor Office is to collect and distribute information on all subjects relating to the adjustment of international conditions of industrial life and labor, and particularly on subjects which are proposed to be brought before the Conference in connection with proposed international conventions. The Conference may formulate and submit either recommendations for national legislation or regulation by the respective powers, or proposed international conventions to become treaties binding upon the respective parties. Provision is made for enforcing by economic measures any convention which shall have been ratified, but not properly carried out, by any nation. Complaints of this character may be submitted to investigation by a commission of inquiry, or by the permanent court of international justice of the League of Nations. Machinery is provided, whereby a state which fails to carry out its obligations, or to enforce a convention which has been ratified, may be subjected to economic measures to compel it to do so. But no nation shall be asked or required by the Conference as a result of the adoption of any recommendation or draft convention, to diminish the protection afforded by its existing legislation to the workers concerned.

The extent and scope of activities of this proposed organization is indicated by the programme adopted by the Commission itself for the first meeting of the Conference, to be held in October next. It involves the application of the principle of an eight-hour day or forty-eight-hour week, prevention of employment of women before and after child-birth, at night, or in unhealthy positions, and the employment of children.

Joseph looked impervious to knowledge, but I had no reason to anticipate that he would prove at all troublesome. "Goodbye, be a good boy," called his mother from the door. For the first time Joseph demonstrated that he possessed some sense of what was going on outside of himself. His screams brought his mother quick to his back, and from one penny she raised to two, and finally offered everything she had. But to no avail, for he still continued to stamp and scream. And so I requested her to leave, assuring her that all would be well. With tears in her eyes she said, "Do let me take him home. I think he is very much of a baby." But I was obdurate and refused, for I knew that with every added day of his overindulgence his road would only grow the harder.

New, Lively Associates
Surrounded by his own associates of his own age, Joseph soon forgot his mother and himself, and although he was not very active at first, each succeeding day developed more interest and expression, until finally his mother was able to see a smile on his face when she made him goodby at the opening of the morning session.

But what labors we had taken upon our hands with her helpless, pitiful pet! How much harder his little battle through life had been made and how much unhappiness he suffered. Many a mother thinks the age between 3 and 4 much too early to lay the foundation of self-reliance in her children. She says: "My child too young to learn yet. When he goes to school he will be taught to do everything and that is time enough."

And so he waits upon him day and night, amuses him when he appears silent or lonesome, provides for his every want, and seldom asks him for a response of any kind. In fact, she absorbs his whole personality, impressing her own where his should have a chance to demonstrate itself. Froebel said: "Our children must learn to do, by doing." Then what happiness, individuality and calm, deliberate deportment even at the early age of 4 they may possess, and what self-controlled, law-abiding citizens they may become if only mothers will try day by day to develop their self-reliance!

How shall this be done? Just teach our child to dress himself, to wash his hands and face, to face his shoes, to comb his hair, to button his coat, to use his spoon, knife and fork. Command his mind to use and struggles and sooner or later those struggles will be converted into finished actions. And hands so trained at home will later in school life grasp scissors more firmly and handle crayon and pencil with a much finer precision.

Fill the child's day with responsibilities: The care of a garden, of cat or dog, care of toys and care and proper place for clothes. Help him to anticipate your wants, and give him the joy of waiting upon you. Have him run little errands for your seasons, your needles, your thread. Let him care for baby brother or sister once in a while. There will be lots of time besides for play, and a greater value placed upon play time. Such duties to a child are not burdens, but a real delight, because they develop in him a sense of independence and helpfulness.

Help to reach all the parents of the country by cutting this out and passing it on to a friend.

Family Secret
"I bet I know what makes sister wear her hair bunched down over her ears," said the small boy.
"Do you?" replied the affable young man.

"Yes. But I ain't going to tell. Only if my ears were as big as sister's I'd do something like that myself."

Going Farther and Farther Worse.
"A long walk will give you a fine appetite."
"That's the reason. I'm sitting still," replied Mr. Growcher. "I can't afford a fine appetite."

WASHINGTON'S KICK

Washingtonians will not permit it to be forgotten that in this government "of the people, by the people and for the people" they have no word to say. The District of Columbia, governed by Congress, has no representative in that body. Hence this protest, now conspicuously posted in front of the White House.

DECLARES TREATY IS WORSE THAN LEAGUE

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Senator Moses in a speech in the senate today declared the treaty terms are worse for the United States than is the league of nations. He said the treaty provides so many commissions to carry out specific parts of the terms that the league is not necessary to make the peace settlement effective.

EVEN LITTLEST CHILD IS NOT TOO YOUNG TO LEARN SELF RELIANCE

Starting to Kindergarten, Youngsters Display Results of Home Training.

This is one of a series of articles issued by the National Kindergarten Association, 3 West 40th st., New York. They are appearing weekly in these columns.

By HELEN CAMPBELL.
School had opened in the district and all through an exciting day, all varieties of the four-year-olds, accompanied by all types of "the mother," were applying for admission.

Mary's mother, of calm, firm, but gentle bearing, stepped forward and the duty of registration properly fulfilled, presented her little daughter. Mary possessed the same calm manner as her mother and in addition, a strange childlike dignity and poise of her own. Her two little bright eyes bespoke thought and understanding as she stood there on the alert for every question, at times even assuming the responsibility of the conversation herself. She had been carefully prepared by her mother for this new period of development and so could face it without fear. Therefore, it was no surprise to us to hear her mother say at the conclusion of her visit: "Mary can take off her coat and wait upon her self. She will not cry, for I told her she was coming to school and explained what she would have to do. She is a great help to me at home and I am sure will give you no trouble." Then, turning to Mary, she waved a "goodbye, dear," and Mary, smiling with satisfaction, sat down in her little chair.

We were not allowed to waste much time with Mary just then for suddenly there was a great pushing to the front and hurried childish sounds of "I'm 4 years old, I'm waxinated, I live at 438 East . . . My father's name is Jimmy and he's dead and I want to glad you can come to school?" No come to school every day! Now can I move of the eyes or face, no sign have a little chair? Can I play with of comprehension. "He doesn't like your ball, and make houses with to talk very much." His mother answered and sew cards and bring home sweater. Then his cake fell to the floor things every day like all the other and when I asked him to see if he was boys that go to kindergarten?" When "big enough to pick it up, again it was Jimmie stopped to catch his breath. I the mother who replied, "He doesn't fully realized that he had made up ever do anything like that," and she his mind to come to school, and that, stooped and picked up the cake her- indeed, he was quite ready to do so, self.

Developed Accidentally
Yes, Jimmie, the youngest of nine, entered school alone, but full of enthusiasm and ambition, with a brain eager for stories and games, and with if you can teach him something. hands that wanted to work, to learn, can't."

and to do. Fate had seemed unkind to him, but although a victim of rough circumstances he had developed fortunately and accidentally in the right direction. He turned out to be a most interesting pupil in the classroom and soon became an obedient, law-abiding child.

Two big, blue sleepy eyes, mounted in a great wonderful head, supported by the stockiest of frames, there were the striking characteristics of the next little fellow who stood before me. A poor, indulgent mother held his hat in one hand and his apple in the other, together with a penny to give him when he cried and a basket of cakes for fear he might be hungry. As she pushed her son toward me she gave his name as Joseph Carlson.

"Good morning, Joseph. Are you in Jimmy and he's dead and I want to glad you can come to school?" No come to school every day! Now can I move of the eyes or face, no sign have a little chair? Can I play with of comprehension. "He doesn't like your ball, and make houses with to talk very much." His mother answered and sew cards and bring home sweater. Then his cake fell to the floor things every day like all the other and when I asked him to see if he was boys that go to kindergarten?" When "big enough to pick it up, again it was Jimmie stopped to catch his breath. I the mother who replied, "He doesn't fully realized that he had made up ever do anything like that," and she his mind to come to school, and that, stooped and picked up the cake her- indeed, he was quite ready to do so, self.

Her mission of registration over Mrs. Carlson started to go, but suddenly returned to make these feeble remarks: "You know, teacher, he is 4 years old, but he isn't any good to himself. I have to do everything for him and if I don't he cries. I know I put him too much, but try him and see if you can teach him something. I thread.
