Tells of Life on Big British Ocean Flyer

Correspondent Describes 108-Hour Trip in Violent Weather Conditions.

NEW YORK, July 25.—"The British never break a promise." This statement by Commander G. H. Scott, of the British Dirigible R-34, explained my visit to the interior of the giant ship during her stay at Mineola. Only two male civilians boarded the ship for inspection and my permission to do so was granted as the result of a promise made on the first day of her arrival.

Thus it is possible for the United Press to give the first details of the living and working accommodations on the aircraft as seen through a landman's eyes.

In spite of what may appear to be hardships and discomforts, perils and privations there were none of the thirty members of the crew who failed to express the same admiration for her that is felt by those who have become accustomed to travel on certain steamships.

Pride in Undertaking "Of course the quarters are rather cramped and the conditions under which we live are unusual," said Lieut. R. D. Durrant, the radio operator, "but it is a splendid thing to feel that one is a part of a new transportation development—and then, too, it is our duty to our country to further her interests."

This is the spirit that kept the officers and crew cheerful during their 108-hour trip westward, when weather conditions and atmospheric changes of unusual variety made life on the dirigible anything but rosy.

One of the greatest drawbacks to life on the R-34, perhaps, is the lack of space in which to exercise. Although there is a "boat" which extends along its keel, this is only a few inches wide and as I walked it, cut-like, I could not help wondering what might happen if some of the crew took an overdose of the trim rail allowed all members of the British navy, on sea or in air, and tried to walk it off.

Before boarding the ship, which was constantly in motion through the action of the wind, although held down by hundreds of men, my shoes, hat and all matches were taken from me. It was to prevent the danger of creating sparks through friction of the nails in shoes. The removal of my hat was no doubt to prevent me dashing after it should it be blown off. A step over the side of the 9-inch walk would land one on the thin linen fabric which covers the aluminum structure, hence through the thin air below.

Liko Steel Skyscraper The dirigible is about 640 feet long and is cigar shaped. The framework is of massive aluminum girders welded together similar to the structural frame of a steel skyscraper. The "ribs" are covered with painted linen, like that used on airplanes, and without the body thus formed are the sixteen "gas" bags, sleeping quarters, petrol tanks, water ballast and drinking water. The navigation quarters and engines are in the gondolas which hang below.

petrol tanks which supply fuel to the engines by gravity flow, are located beside the narrow walk and are held by clutches like ice tongs, which can be quickly opened to drop the tanks overhead if necessary. One of the steel cables, which are hung from the aluminium frame, are of the air-gobs or officers should become restless in sleep and roll out. He would fall through the fabric which encases the frame, and make a swift descent to land or sea. Tied to each hammock is a deflated rubber life preserver and a silken parachute. In case of a great emergency, as fire, of imminent destruction through other causes, the life belt is inflated and the parachute hooked to a ring in a rope which is attached to make a descent to land or sea. To make a safe descent, thus prepared for the event, the wearer must jump upon a circle in the linen fabric which has been cut out and replaced, held by a soft gum. This gives way, and permits him to fall through, leaving a clean, round opening instead of a tear.

These "air-gobs" are located at intervals along the aluminium petrol tanks, of which, there are 81, each weighing 500 pounds and each containing 70 gallons. Sixteen of them are fixed and the remainder are called slip tanks. Should occasion require rapid ascent or immediate descent to land or sea, the petrol tanks are released from their fastenings and drop on and thru the holes.

Light is Economy The only light in the living quarters is that which flickers through the green-painted linen, an incandescent glow of dim light. At night hand electric lights are used and when the watches are changed, every four hours, these lights are used to signal the approach of one of the crew along the walk should another member be coming from the opposite direction. There are no turn-ons on this narrow-gauge walk.

Amidship is the "dining hall" or "grand salon," or whatever a fastidious officer may choose to call it. It is simply a widening out of the walk, the floor space at that point measuring about 10 by 15 feet. Here there are a long table and a tiny washstand, also three tanks of distilled drinking water, each containing seventy gallons.

At meal time half of the crew off duty can squeeze into this space and eat their prepared food, which is cooked, foot, buffet style. There are no chairs on the ship. Roasts, steaks, and potatoes, a limited variety of vegetables, coffee or cocoa comprise the meals. They are heated when wanted on appliances attached to the engine exhaust pipes. Obviously there is no international cigar or cigarette enjoyed aboard.

Observer Must be Acrobat One can stand upright traveling the length of the ship except near the bow and stern, where the gas bags are nearer the bottom of the hull and develop. There are eighteen hot-cold gas compartments within the shell, with a capacity of 2,000,000 cubic feet. Forward and aft there is a long, perpendicular ladder, extending upward between bags and reaching to the roof. The observer is obliged to scale this narrow and wiggly aluminium affair whenever he wants to "take a show" at the sun in making observations. I got half way up but the gas frame, being the fact that the dirigible was being held to earth, forced me down precipitately in utter disregard to the dents made in the soles of my scuffed-soled feet by the sharp metal rungs of the ladder.

In the extreme stern, modern sanitary arrangements are arranged. Hanging below the bag are four "gondolas," or cars, one under the bow; two, side by side, amidship; and one under the stern. The forward gondola contains the "bridge" and chart room and navigators' quarters, as well as the wireless room and forward engine.

Appliances Complete The navigating and pilot room, about six feet wide and ten feet long, is the last word in completeness of navigation appliances. By means of speaking tubes and bells, all parts of the ship are connected from this room. It is through this room that the ship is hoisted from the ground, hoisted above being via another aluminium ladder.

The two gondolas amidship, reached from the "envelop" by metal ladders, contain a single engine, controlled by two men. The after gondola has two engines and one propeller. When the R-34 silently nosed her way on to the field at Mineola, there were comparatively few to receive her, the landing crew having been rushed 100 miles away to where it was believed she would be forced to land. She hovered around, however, with an almost human appearance of hesitancy, as though she were looking for a comfortable place to lie down. Finally, after circling a few times, coming down by degrees to an elevation that permitted the ropes dangling from her to be grasped by a hastily collected "landing party" of more than three hundred men.

Departed Silently One feature of the mammoth dirigible that seemed to impress many of the thousands who saw her, was the peculiar silence which seemed to mark her departure. This silence, of course, did not apply to the throngs, but to the monster, as she gracefully and majestically raised her head and slipped swiftly upward and away into the night.

Lightfingered Thief Gets $1300 From Pocket While Man Waits for Elevated

NEW YORK, July 25.—The robbery of William Wetzler of 341 East 42nd street of $1300 in currency attracted attention to the increased activity of pickpockets in the last few weeks.

Wetzler had drawn the money from the bank to use in a business deal. He and his wife were standing on an elevated platform at Fifty-seventh street and Second avenue. They were caught in the crowd and Wetzler felt himself unjustly. When he got on the train he discovered that his wallet was gone.

In connection with the numerous complaints which have been received of pocket picking it was recalled that virtually all the old members of the famous pickpocket squad of the detective bureau had been transferred by Commissioner Burght to other work. Detective Frank Canessa, who was famous for his knowledge of "dips" and who used to lecture to the other detectives on the habits of the light-fingered crew, is now doing duty as a

Thief Loses Cash He Stole From "Y" Hut at 3:30 in Morning

NEW YORK, July 25.—After knocking a Y. M. C. A. secretary unconscious and robbing the safe in the Eagle Hut of the "Y" at Bryant Park of $200 early yesterday morning, an unidentified burglar lost all his booty a short time later. The stranger entered the hut at half-past three o'clock in the morning and told the secretary, George Hissert, that he wanted a suitcase he had checked there. In the baggage room, where the secretary took him to identify the suitcase, the thief knocked Mr. Hissert unconscious, took the keys to the safe from his pocket and robbed it of $20 in cash. Meanwhile a dozen soldiers and sailors were sleeping soundly in the lounge room adjoining. An hour later Policeman Isaac Kahn of the Mercer street station, met a man carrying a suitcase in Waverley place and stopped him. The stranger persisted indignantly at the interference and said the bag contained clothes. Kahn stopped the argument and ordered that the bag be opened, whereupon the stranger, after hitting him, tripped him up and ran. Kahn sitting on the sidewalk, fired five shots into the fugitive and then gave chase, but the thief escaped. At the Mercer street station the $20 was found in cash boxes in the suit case.

Booze Is Not a Good Cure.

(From the Ames Iowa Intelligence.) When a man comes to you all doubled up with pain and declares he will die in your presence unless you procure him a drink of whiskey, send him to a doctor or else give him a dose of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy. There is a mistaken notion among a whole lot of people that booze is the best remedy for colic and stomach ache.

Beauty In Old Age.

You often see a beautiful old lady and she seems to be as happy as she is beautiful, for beauty and happiness depend largely upon good health. Indigestion or constipation are to a great extent responsible when old age lacks beauty and happiness. This can often be remedied by taking Chamberlain's Tablets. They strengthen the digestion, invigorate the liver and move the bowels. This makes you feel better and look better. Try it! They only cost a quarter.

Good for Indigestion.

If you are troubled with indigestion take a few doses of Chamberlain's Tablets. They strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. They also cause a gentle movement of the bowels. You will be surprised when you see how much better you are feeling after taking a few doses of them.
