Tips Fall Off With Big Drought in N. Y.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Tips don't average 10 per cent of the checks now, is the sad cry coming from headquarters of the local waiters' union. Waiters who had to worry with income tax returns and such things last year, probably won't have that burden to bear them down again, for two highballs under a patron's belt, they say, made him twice as generous. Many a waiter will have to sell his country estate to make both ends meet.

But the big hotels aren't worrying. They are waiting to reach their bridges before they cross them and the absence of booze hasn't been in effect long enough, most of the managers say, to give them a chance to form any opinions as to how it will affect their dining rooms.

At one big local hotel, the manager declared he believed the waiters undoubtedly would ask for an increase over the standard wage now received. Included with their stipulated salary waiters are given meals and it became known today that the waiting profession is a "dog-eat-dog" business, for the waiters complain they have to tip the waiters who wait upon them in the servants' dining rooms of the hotels.

Mechanical contrivances to take the place of the human element in the dining room are impossible, the waiters say, and managers of the big hotels agree with them. The waiters don't look for automatic contrivances.

There are probably 10,000 waiters in New York who range from the high price roof garden parlors to ordinary lunch counter waiters. In the latter places they get a little more money from the management, because tips are small.

The waiters themselves say that many of their number have been laid off since the exit of liquor. This with tips falling off for those allowed to work, and the high cost of waiters' tips to other waiters, is bringing more complaints from this ancient and honorable order of knights of politeness, and they think a request of more wages to make up the ungenerosity of non-drinking dinner guests is inevitable. This campaign probably will start in September.

HOUSEHOLD

Gelatin Desserts.
A gelatin dessert can be made in layers for a change—two flavors, each whipped and each plain, making four layers.

A Substitute
Allow two level teaspoonfuls of baking powder to each cupful of flour when no eggs are used.

A Good Fly Trap.
Cover a bowl of soapy water with a piece of cardboard, cut a hole in the middle about the size of a quarter or a little larger, and smear the edge and underneath the hole with syrup or molasses. The flies will go through for it and drop into the water.

Woodwork Marks.
There is no more efficacious way of removing finger marks from woodwork, window panes or porcelain than by wiping them with a cloth moistened with kerosene.

Thrill.
When a slice or two of bread is left from a meal, do not put into the bread box to be forgotten but cover over in a dish and use for toast at the next meal.

Beaten Eggs.
Add a pinch of cream of tartar to the whites of eggs when they are half beaten. This keeps them from falling before being used.

Real Help.
Indian meal, moistened and applied to soiled places on carpets will often remove all traces of the spots and without the slightest injury to the most delicate colors.

Try This
When boiling rice or macaroni put a small piece of butter of oleomargarine in the water and it will not boil over on the stove, and improves the flavor of the dish.

Vastly Different
The talk had ranged from jaxing to oysters, and then on to violets. She made it go that way.

"Of course there's a big difference between a botanist and a florist," said the young man.

"Is there, really?" asked his fair companion.

"Yes. A botanist is one who knows all about flowers, and a florist is one who knows all about the price people will pay for them."

BOOK SHELF

- Would you like to know more about South Americans, etc?
- Additional books dealing with S. A., etc.
- Newly acquired books on newspapers.
- Other books on Journalism.

WOULD YOU LIKE TO KNOW MORE ABOUT THE SOUTH AMERICANS? THEN READ THESE NEW BOOKS.

Why the South American loves France, why, in spite of inter-marriage trade methods, and propaganda through the schools, he cannot be brought to love Germany; what is his attitude toward America, his domestic, social, commercial and political life and ideas; the characteristics and status of women—these are only a few of the intensely interesting questions discussed in "Understanding South America" by Clayton Sedgwick Cooper.

Exporting to Latin America by Pilsinger gives within a small compass a most exhaustive fund of information for those who wish to deal directly in a business way with the Latin American Republics, and it furnishes as well, extended first hand knowledge of the people and their literature. A section of the book is devoted to tariffs, custom house regulations, the preparation of suitable advertising matter, shipping routes, etc.; another describes European and American methods of the export commission houses, methods of obtaining general and local agents, and in fact, supplying all needed information for every day use, making this volume a complete encyclopedia of facts concerning the economic, social and commercial situation in the countries south of us.

South and Central American Trade Conditions of Today by Verrill is of the greatest possible interest to the "real" traveler, who wants to know all about the countries he visits, and does not confine himself to their scenic beauties or possibilities of entertainment alone. There is so much rich interest for a student of national traits in this little book that many will read it with delight, even though their paths lie far from the marts of trade.

Young Man's Chances in South and Central America by Reid touches upon conditions and opportunities in trade—engineering, architecture, banking, manufacturing, teaching, journalism, insurance, law, medicine and miscellaneous vocations in the countries of South and Central America and to some extent in Mexico and Cuba. It also includes personal experiences and observations, the stories of success and failure of others, the Latin-American student movement and other topics.

Other, Newspaper writing and editing. This book is adapted both for use in college classes in journalism and for study in persons interested in journalism who are not attending college. The needs of these two groups are not essentially different. ### A Way Out.

Aunt Mary was very strict, too strict for Eric and his little sister, who were fed up with staying with her.

She certainly tried her best to amuse them, and one morning took them to the zoo. But it was a failure.

"Eric, keep away from that cage! Molly, your hats crooked! Those seats are dirty, Eric—keep off them! If you bite the finger of your glove again Molly, I shall take you straight home!"

It was like a never-ending gramophone record on good behavior, and Aunt Mary never seemed to tire.

At last the little party paused before a cage, and Aunt Mary consulted her catalogue.

"This, children," she announced, "is an ant-eater."

Eric looked cautiously around as he whispered to Molly.

"Can't we push her in?"

Passing the Word Along

THERE'S a good fellowship between car-owners which makes everybody anxious that the other should get all the benefits going in the handling of his car.

That's why there is so much mouth-to-mouth advertising of Firestone Gray Sidewall Tires.

One man tells the story of the better-than-ever work he is getting this year from the Gray Sidewall Firestones. The other buys a set—and so the good word passes along.

Result—wonderful and constantly growing numbers of this tire all over the West.

Goodrich De Luxe

The truck owners of Butte know the M. F. Rohn Teaming Company to be a carefully Managed organization.

It operates five 5-ton trucks and two 2-ton trucks at remarkably low expense.

In a large measure the "down to the bone" upkeep of Rohn Trucks is due to the selection of Goodrich De Luxe Truck Tires as tire equipment.

In hauling ore—the heaviest of dead weights—and mining machinery, Mr. Rohn finds that the broad, deep strip of sturdy rubber across the TOP of De Luxe Treads gives these tires a marked advantage in cushioning qualities—and thus lessens the possibilities of damage to the mechanism of his trucks from the hammering of road and load.

Profit by Mr. Rohn's experience. Put De Luxe Tires on your trucks. Their extra rubber means greater protection and greater mileage—economy from every standpoint.
