"Fantan Your Honor, Quite a Lively Game," Chinese Pay $20 Each

PORTLAND, Aug. 16.—"Ah Gee, Ah Goon, Ah Bo, Ah Gin."

"Ah, well," sighed Acting Judge Richard Deitch, as he read those four names on the docket.

"Fantan, your honor, quite a lively game, at 32 Second street," chorused Officers Corlier and Scobius, temporary guardians of the four silent Chinamen.

The officers said they spent two hours in the room occupied by the alleged fantan players, quietly watching the game. Arrests followed.

"Ah, well," reiterated the judge, "you men made a serious mistake to ever let those patrolmen get into the room. I might under some circumstances forgive you even that, but what do you mean by hitting these playing the fantan for two hours while the officers were in the same room? Don't you know an officer's time is worth more than that? Pay fines of $20 each."

Gas Killed 700 U. S. Soldiers.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—Seven hundred and fifty-six of the American soldiers killed in action were victims of gas, according to an announcement today by the war department. The average age of the men killed was 23 years. The total of missing in action on July 31 was 241, the department announcing that large reductions had been made in the list as a result of checking against the list of the central records office of the expeditionary office.

One may presently expect a brotherhood of farmers to take over regulation of daylight and the weather.

Bitter Anti-American Feeling Started Riots Among Men in Siberia

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 1.—Captain Stephen Chadwick, Seattle lawyer, who has returned from work with the American army in Siberia, tells of many instances of fighting between American and Japanese soldiers, due to the bitter anti-Americanism of the Japanese.

Chadwick says the acrimonious attitude of the Japanese army is very marked in Siberia. He asserts that every move and action of the Japanese plainly showed their dislike for Americans.

"In one instance, at a small railroad station," said Chadwick, "an American soldier brushed by a Japanese soldier who was occupying the biggest part of the passageway. The Japanese immediately called for help asserting the American had assaulted him."

"A squad of Japanese soldiers then came out and bayoneted and butted the American with their guns. The American was rescued by American comrades."

Captain Chadwick, who was located in Khabarovsk, a city of 35,000 people, says that the English translation of Japanese editorials and news stories showed an avowed feeling against the United States.

"It is my opinion that the Japanese signed the peace treaty for diplomatic effect entirely," stated the captain.
