SHOULD LOVE COME BACK.

Should love come back, and humbly pardon crave
For all the tears and sorrows that he gave.
Could I forgive and smile his face to see.
Could I take his hand and greet him merrily—
Forget that he was but a traitor knave?
And, were he wounded, would I gladly slave.
His bruised wings from harm or fear to save?
Ah, well, who knows what tenderness might be.
Should love come back.

But, if he strove his penitence to brave
With mirth and jest, and sang a careless slave;
Or, if he brought no penitence as plea,
Still would I grant him of my sympathy?
Ah, heart, what need of question light or grave.
Should love come back!
—Charlotte Becker in People's Home Journal.

NOW FOR RATIFICATION.

PRESIDENT WILSON met the virtual challenge of the senatorial opponents of the peace treaty and the League of Nations by the freest and fullest presentation of the conditions and considerations which dictated the engagement that are now awaiting ratification by the senate. For three and a half hours the president answered the questions propounded to him by members of the foreign relations committee. With patience, painstaking and the utmost frankness he responded to their request for information.

This conference was without precedent in American history, but it amply fulfilled the president's promise—made months ago—that he would take the senate and the country into his confidence in respect to the treaty and the League. It was the fault of the senate committee that this complete exposition and explanation of the treaty and the covenant was not sooner forthcoming. The president upon his return from France expressed his willingness—and at the conference showed his preparedness—to clarify and justify every act of the Paris peace council.

From the lips of the man who was one of the authors of the treaty and of the League—who knows every inch of the ground between their inception and their consummation—the foreign relations committee has learned that Article X of the covenant is subject to our own judgment and to the authority of congress; that the Monroe Doctrine is beyond the purview of the League; that questions of purely domestic policy and government, like immigration and the tariff, are equally outside its jurisdiction. If the senators who have opposed the treaty and the League continue their obstruction it will not be for want of understanding and reassurances. Their opposition henceforth will be suspected as of a different origin.

The president made it quite plain to the members of the foreign relations committee that, if they choose to regard their country's obligations lightly, they may adopt interpretations that do not alter the text or impair the force of the treaty. If such "interpretations" in a separate resolution will save their pride without at the same time jeopardizing the advantages which the United States derives from the treaty and the security which all the world obtains through the League, the senators are free, so far as the president is concerned, to take that course.

Whatever the action of the recalcitrant senators may be, the people's attitude will be unmistakable. They know the president has had a greater opportunity and a better right to judge of the need and meaning and value of the treaty and of the League than the senatorial critics of his work have had. If neither is perfect the people are not dissatisfied. They will not tolerate the senate's attempt to give them less because they have not obtained more. They want the treaty ratified and the covenant accepted without further delay.

ROOM FOR THE FLEET.

DISCUSSING the coming of the new fleet to the Pacific and what it means to the western coast, the Astoria Evening Budget says:

The Astoria harbor is considered the strategic base for the defense of the north Pacific coast by both the army and navy, in all their practice work. It has a harbor entrance which carries a depth of over 42 feet at mean low tide, the greatest depth at the entrance of any harbor in the world. On top of this there is a side of approximately eight feet twice each day, giving a maximum of 50 feet, amply sufficient to accommodate the largest battleship afloat. This harbor is vast enough and deep enough to afford safe anchorage for the entire Pacific fleet and we have here the most suitable site in the Northwest for the establishment of a monster naval station.

The fact that water on the bar and in the Astoria harbor is of sufficient depth to admit the largest battleship afloat and that there is room in the mouth of the river for the entire Pacific fleet will be a source of pride not merely to Astorians, but to the people of the entire state.

With a great fleet permanently located on the Pacific steps must be taken for accommodation of the ships in harbors. The people of Oregon should unite in seeing that our advantages are not overlooked by the naval department.

The will of Andrew Carnegie shows that he had given away nine-tenths of his wealth and thus in a measure fulfilled his claim that a man should not die rich. His will designates that Mrs. Carnegie should have the task of providing for their daughter, holding that mother love will point the way. Did he mean this or was that a case of passing the buck?

Some claim that bolshevism means the rule of the majority. It does not. It means rule by a tyrannical minority that gets and holds its power by force. The American government is founded on majority rule and can be made to answer every purpose desired by those who honestly wish a government of the people, by the people, for the people.

It looks like an additional story may be needed for the Round-Up grandstand.

ARCADE

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

The Knickerbocker BUCKAROO

"Doug" thought out a lot of new stunts during those six months. For instance: He leaves the window of a flying train, climbs over the car's side to the roof, runs along the roof to the mail-coach, is swung from that car to the station by the mail conveyor like a sack of fourth-class mail, dropping onto the back of a horse that gallops madly off. That's only one of his stunts! That's only one of the laughs! You can't afford to miss all the rest.

ABOUT THE STARS

Libra. (The Scales.)

Libra is the first autumnal constellation in the Zodiac and the only one of Egyptian origin, and also the only one that represents an inanimate object. It is unlawful, according to Arabian custom, to depict the human form. This constellation being on the meridian at the time of the Autumnal equinox, it is supposed that the Scales or balance was adopted to show the equality in length of time between day and night. Service thinks there are indications in the valley of the Euphrates that the constellation originally stood for the "Tower of Babel." But the Chinese and Hindus and also the early Hebrews all regarded it as a balance, while the early Christians identified it with the balance in which Belshazzar was weighed and found wanting. Some ascribed it as the "Twelve Tribes of Israel" ascribing it to the tribe of Asher.

All the constellations of the Zodiac were in general use by the Ancients as a perpetual almanac as well as a time piece, and in Arabic even to the present day they are in use.

The late Hamer Davenport related that when he was in Arabia some years ago he wished to make a journey across the desert for the purpose of purchasing an Arabian stallion. He appealed to the Sheikh of a tribe for a guide and was greatly surprised when the guide appeared in the person of a lad of twelve years. Mr. Davenport departed at so youthful a pilot, Salleylicaid.

but was assured that all would be well, and with some misgivings they set out at sunset on their journey of 60 miles across the trackless desert. He said they rode as straight as a crow could fly and nearly as swiftly. His small companion explained to him by the stars, the month of the year, the day of the month, and, as time sped on the hours of the night besides many other interesting things. At sunrise they arrived safely at his destination, having gained more knowledge of astronomy in one night than he had ever known before.
