"A Moral From The Movies"

To be loyal to your country is certainly most commendable. To be loyal to your state is well and good, but to be loyal to the community in which you live comes first of all. Loyal citizens are constant boosters. What's more, they "Practice what they preach." They patronize home manufacturing establishments themselves and urge their friends and neighbors to patronize them for the very sufficient reasons, viz: That increased patronage increases pay-rolls, increases population—that increased population increases property values—business in general; offers additional opportunities for all and makes for the added prosperity of every citizen.

Let all of us be constantly on the lookout for the "home-made" label. See that the words are stamped indelibly, not only upon the article you purchase, but upon your memory as well. To remember to look for this imprint is to take the precaution of making your own future success more certain.
