Equipment Must be Proper; Temperature Adjusted and Grounds Clean; Teacher Required to Follow Course.

Cards setting forth the requirements of a standard school in the state board of education Sept. 1, were received Monday by County Superintendent W. W. Green. Supplies of these cards will be sent to each district in the county at once.

As soon as any district fulfills any requirement it is to be marked with a star and when all requirements are met with a certificate or pennant is awarded by the county superintendent. The rules which must be followed in order for a school to be standard are as follows:

The teacher's equipment is to include a desk, substantial and large enough for books and records, fitted with locks, mouse-proof, and a chair substantial and adjustable. For pupils, desks properly adapted and placed are required; suitable blackboards are desired. Window shades must be in good condition and each school must have a Bacon phonograph and a Courtis cabinet with a supply of practice pads and a teacher's manual.

Grounds are to be clean and free of paper at all times. At least three features of play apparatus, as given in the Oregon recreational manual, must be provided. Walks are to be built if necessary. Pure drinking water either from drinking fountain or from a covered tank and individual drinking cups, is required. At least two out-buildings, to be clean and free from marks are stipulated.

The teacher is to obtain good order at all times, supervise the play-ground, have her work well-prepared, follow the state course of study,

BOSTON—A lot of formal plans for entertaining royalty were brushed aside by Miss Anna Hamilton, daughter of Charles S. Hamilton of the Federal Reserve Bank. Miss Hamilton's smiling invitation to the Belgian Crown Prince, Leopold, to motor with her when the royal party landed in Boston, was accepted and the young man was shown all the classic sights of Boston, including Harvard and the Stadium.

Serge Francis Code, WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—John Spargo, socialist and writer, is working to bring capital and labor nearer together in the industrial conference. He is preparing a complete code of basic principles of industrial relations which he hopes to introduce and to have adopted, principle by principle.

take at least one educational journal, have a daily program, approved by the county superintendent posted in the room within the first month of school, keep the register in good condition and be neat in attire.

An average attendance of pupils of 92 per cent and not more than 2 per cent tardiness is standard. Provisions are made also for standard pictures, a standard library and supplementary readers.

FRED LOCKLEY TELLS OF EARLY DAYS WHEN ONLY FEW WERE HERE

'The Journal Man' Recounts Tales of When Ed Marshall Rode Plains and Indian Made Way With His Revolver.

Fred Lockley, formerly a member of the East Oregonian now of the Oregon Journal, recently wrote the following article which appeared in the Journal under the head "Impressions and Observations of the Journal Man":

"Recently I sat with a group of old-time Pendletonians and the talk drifted to the days when Pendleton had but a few hundred inhabitants and was an eating station on the stage line from Umatilla to Boise. One of the group mentioned the opening of the Indian reservation, which reminded Lee Moorhouse of his early day experiences with the Indians. 'An Indian can take a whole lot more medicine than a white man,' said Major Moorhouse. 'D. William C. Mc. McKay was the agency doctor when I was Indian agent for the Umatilla. I used to put in a good deal of spare time in his office, studying medicine.'

"He-yute-sil-mil-iken was one of the most trustworthy of the Indians, so I appointed him Indian policeman. He was a fine stalwart fellow, hard as nails and very faithful. He was subject to severe headaches, and Dr. McKay used to give him a drug that gave him temporary relief. One day he came in with a splitting headache and asked for Dr. McKay. Dr. McKay happened to be gone, so I decided to see what I could do to help him out. Antipyrine had just come on the market. I looked up the dispensary for 1883 to see how much of a dose I should give, but it was not listed. I had heard that it was good for headache, so I decided to guess as to the size of the dose I should administer. The Indian took the medicine. A rather peculiar look came over his face and he sat down in a chair. The sweat began running down his face in a perfect stream. Pretty soon his head fell forward, his body relaxed, and, in spite of my shaking him violently, he remained unconscious. I saw I had a dead Indian on my hands, so I began frantically on an excuse to give Dr. McKay when he returned. Presently I heard a noise, and I saw He-yute-sil-mil-iken staggering to his feet. He threw his long black hair over his shoulders, and, turning to me, said: 'Headache gone.' And he walked, though not very steadily, out of the office.

"I decided not to say anything about my amateur doctoring. About a week later he came back with another severe headache. Dr. McKay started to fix up his regular headache medicine, but the Indian shook his head and said he wanted some hi-hi medicine. 'Who gave you the hi-hi medicine,' Dr. McKay asked. He pointed to me. Dr. McKay turned to me and asked, 'What did you give him, mayor?' I said, 'Antipyrine.' 'How much?' asked Dr. McKay. 'Thirty grains,' I responded, and it sure cured his headache.' Dr. McKay gave me a startled look and said, 'I should say it would! It would either cure him or kill him! Six grains is a dose. You gave him five times too much. He must have a constitution like an ox, or you would have killed him.'"

"Indians have peculiar ideas. Because we cannot think like an Indian we often misjudge them. Twenty-five years or more ago Ed Marshall was driving some stock across the Umatilla reservation. Ed had recently paid $5 for a fine colt revolver of which he was very proud. He lost it near Kash-Kash's place—or to give Kash-Kash's Indian name, Speckled Bird. Ed told Kash-Kash to hunt for it and he would give him $5 reward if he found it. Kash-Kash put in three days looking for the revolver but without success. A few weeks later he found it. Marshall heard Kash-Kash had found it, and meeting him produced the $5 and demanded the gun. Kash-Kash refused to take the $5 and also refused to give up the gun. He said: 'You hired me to look for it for three days and promised me $5. I didn't find the gun on your time. I found it on my own time. If I had found it during the three days you paid me to hunt for it, then it would have been yours; but you were not paying me when I found it.' Kash-Kash, according to the Indian custom, was entitled to the gun, but Ed Marshall couldn't see it that way. Ed knew that Kash-Kash was very religious, so he threatened to have the matter brought up before the church. Kash-Kash handed him the gun and said 'I have heard white men are crooked. I see you are a white man.'"

Told of Situation.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—President Wilson has been informed of the treaty situation in the senate through a letter from Senator Hitchcock. It is learned at the White House today, President Wilson has been told of other matters, such as the threatened miners' strike and the deadlock in the industrial conference by Secretary Tumulty.
