LITTLE DOG JACK.

Here is the collar of little dog Jack.
 But its winsome owner will not come back.
 He wandered off on a winter day
 To find a land where little dogs play.
 We miss him, as over the house we go,
 With his eager pattering to and fro.
 He sits no more at the window high
 To watch the people as they pass by.
 O little dog Jack, you have gone away:
 I wonder much where your small feet stray!
 You have taken our fondest thoughts with you,
 And half the heart of your mistress, too.
 —Anna B. Benschel.

CONDITIONS IMPROVING.

RETURN of the United States to a normal peace basis will hardly have been accomplished by Nov. 11, anniversary of the signing of the armistice. Just how nearly normal the country has become cannot be told because of the new conditions which have arisen. That there is reason for optimism regarding the immediate future is certain and with the treaty likely to be soon disposed of favorably, the improvement in the year is marked.

Leading business journals and financial letters carry an optimistic tone in spite of the undercurrent of unrest. One such publication has the following to say:

Despite the widespread labor unrest, prosperity and good business are reported from all sections of the country. There does not appear to be a pronounced downward tendency in prices, although there have been declines here and there in foodstuffs. The continuance of the high cost of necessary supplies has had no effect, however, upon consumption and the demand for luxuries and the better grades of goods continues steady. Pleas to the general public to save have had no more effect than appeals to industrial workers to increase their output. The dangers in the present situation are understood by everybody, but there is no pessimism anywhere. The confidence of the average citizen in the ability of the United States to weather any storm is profound, and there is not the slightest chance of any revolutionary movement making headway.

The foregoing points out one all important fact in the life of every person; that of heeding the call to save and making the laborer heed the call to produce. With cooperation in those lines, much of the present trouble would be done away with.

AID FOR COLORED FOLK

OPPORTUNITY is presented to Pendletonians, through the message of Rev. R. E. Gornall, of providing its colored population with a church building. Mr. Gornall asks that $2500 be subscribed for this building. At first thought few may be interested but consideration should show them the need.

A church is the educating, the social and spiritual influence among any group. It is insurance against wrong living, crime and lawlessness. Not only is it a check on the wrong, but, on the other hand, it is an upbuilder of the things that are good. As the writer points out, northern populations are assimilating more and more colored people. The northern people can make these people desirable citizens if they will. The little help that can be given is appreciated and will be well repaid in the increased worth of the colored people to their community.

Those who have yearned to act before the motion picture camera can try themselves out this week-end, and, perhaps, have that yearning satisfied.

The chief question before the house is now, Just how dry will it be next year?
