BILLIE RHODES IN "ROUGH NECK" ROLE

Billie Rhodes, the sprightly little star, has in "The Love Call," her latest National production for Exhibitors Mutual release, a role that proves the clever little ingenue possessed of unusual talent for character acting.

Miss Rhodes is always at her best when she is unhampered by conventionalities. As "The Kid," in "The Love Call," the vivacious little actress plays the part of a western girl who has been brought up in a frontier town by her drunken, crusty old father, an ex-mate on a sailing vessel, known as Mate Allen, whose favorite hang-out was O'Keefe's primitive saloon in Chinatown.

The Mate is killed by O'Keefe, and the Kid starts out into the world alone to carry out her murdered father's oft repeated wish that she get an "education." "I don't know what the blazes an 'education' is, but dad wanted I should get it, and I'm goin' after it," was the Kid's comment.

The Kid's quest leads to a romantic meeting with Joe Emory, a sheepherder, and later, an exciting and humorous adventure with a husky, good-natured cowboy, Nick Horton, who pulls the whiskers of a college professor when the professor refused to admit the Kid into the university without some preliminary studying.

There are a couple of exciting rough-and-tumble fights in the production, one between the "Mate" and O'Keefe in the frontier saloon, and another when Nick grabs the professor by his hirsute baroque and mops up the classic floor of the college with the dignified high-brow.

The photography is striking especially the shepherd scenes showing the flock coming down the mountain trail.

ALTA TODAY

PLAYFUL AVIATORS RUIN SCENE

A rather unusual incident took place while Alice Brady, who will be seen at the Alta Theatre today, in the play following, "The Death Dance," was making some scenes at Oak Island for one of Miss Brady's forthcoming Select Pictures. Miss Brady in these scenes, is supposed to have a narrow escape from drowning, being rescued by her leading man, David Powell.

Director John Stuart Robertson, and his assistant, Frank Walden, had just got everything ready for recording in the camera-box, and the camera-men had established his focus on the camera lines, when some one discovered an approaching group of aeroplanes flying low. At an altitude of only thirty feet above the surface of the water, the aviator circled over the party intent upon waving his hands to the famous movie star. Miss Brady soon noted that she is, stopped her work and waved and shouted back her greetings to one of Uncle Sam's Flying Corps. This evidently looked good to the rest of the aviators, for soon the whole group began flying at low altitude over the spot where Miss Brady was being filmed.

To save you much of a good thing, and Director Robertson asked a mechanic, and asked to inform the young flying men that they were ruining a perfectly good picture. However he found it impossible to make himself heard above the roar of the motors. A series of desperate signals, waving, hand waving jumping up and down and pointing at the camera, ensued, and finally it dawned into the minds of the aviators that the orbits of their machines were cutting into

"THE SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS"

Harold Bell Wright's pictureization of his immensely popular novel, "The Shepherd of the Hills," supervised by the author personally will be the attraction at the Arcade theatre for 2 days starting with the matinee today. The film version brings to visual life the lovable characters dear to the hearts of more than 15,000,000 readers, and those who see this masterpiece of fictional photography will be able to follow the adventures of the quaint folk of the Ozarks as they were related in prose.

In putting his novel into film form, the author insisted that the book should be followed page by page, refusing absolutely to allow a professional scenarist to recast his story. The result is a portrayal true to life, and highly interesting for those who have read the book, and extremely fascinating for those who have not perused the printed pages, as the story is absolutely different from any motion picture that has ever been flashed on a local screen.

A cast of unusual talent, that lives, rather than acts the various roles, was chosen by Mr. Wright personally to interpret his story for the silver-sheet.
