

Cost of Living Item.

A prominent banker and commission house partner in discussing the high cost of living yesterday said that for several years he had been giving investment advice to a friend who is in the egg business. Despite the fact that the egg merchant kept a good sized amount invested in securities in the banker's firm the latter presumed that amount to be about the extent of his wealth. A few weeks ago the egg merchant confided that he wanted to quit business and was advised by the banker to put his money into Government bonds. "What will it total?" asked the banker. "Oh, about $1,500,000 I guess," was the nonchalant reply. "Did you make all this on eggs?" he was asked. "Yes, every dollar on eggs." "How did you do it?" "Simplest thing in the world," was the answer. "I bought eggs when nobody wanted 'em, and when they were cheap, put them in cold storage and waited until I got my price."—New York Sun.

ONE BOY WHO WASN'T BOTHERED BY HIGHEST TIDE IN THE HISTORY OF NEW YORK HARBOR

Driven by easterly winds which had prevailed for several days, the highest tide in the history of waterfront workers backed into the Hudson and East Rivers and flooded large areas in lower New York and Hoboken. For several hours ferryboats were unable to make their slips in New Jersey and thousands of commuters were forced to take the tube. The water in some places was knee deep in the streets. This photograph shows a rubber-boated traffic policeman wading a youngster a lift.
