LILA LEE LITTLE GIRL OF THE WILDS IN NEW PHOTOPLAY

In her latest Paramount picture, "A Daughter of the Wolf," Lila Lee comes to the Alta theatre today, in the role of a little motherless child of the North, whose father is a fur smuggler.

Her life has been spent in the vast wilderness of the far north and she has never been to the city to which her father, known as Wolf Answorth, journeys every spring with his furs. This time, however, she prevails upon him to take her with him.

Arriving in the city, accompanied by her father and his smuggling gang, chief among which is Roe, who is jealous of her every action, she meets and falls in love with Robert Draly, who has just been disappointed in the love of another woman. They are separated, however, by the hand of fate and Wolf, to avoid revenue officers, hastens back to his shack in the wilderness, taking Delight, his daughter, with him.

One year later, Draly goes in search of the little girl, whom he realizes he loves. At a camp a short distance from Wolf's habitation, Roe and Draly meet. Roe is jealous of Draly and betrays, suspects him of being a "revenuer." Under the guise of friendship, he leads him out in the wilderness and injures him in a fight. Delight finds Draly and takes him to her cabin. Wolf and Roe are about to kill him when the revenue officers arrive and Wolf is killed and all the smugglers captured. Irving Willat directed and a powerful cast support the star.

DECIDES LOVE PROBLEM BY HIS MARKSMANSHIP

When he is undecided as to whether he shall go at once and ask his sweetheart's father for the girl's hand in marriage, Buddy Apperson, the leading character in "Bill Apperson's Boy," which will be seen at the Arcade theatre today, leaves the question up to his marksmanship as a stone thrower. "If I hit that tree twice out of three times, I'll go ask him," Buddy decides.

As he hits the tree every time, and as the girl happens to overhear him he does not hesitate to go. This is but one of the countless human touches in the story of Kentucky hill folks, in which Jack Pickford is the star, and which bares with intense realism the heart of a mountain lad of eighteen.

GREAT FIGHT SCENE BY SCREEN HEROINE

Attacked by masked men in a lonely dell, who are seeking to kidnap her, Edith Johnson (Edith Johnson) makes a great fight against them in one of the big scenes of the third episode of Vitaphone's adventure serial, "Smashing Barriers," which will be shown at the Pastime Theatre today. The two gangsters, who are trying to prevent her from reaching her father, whom their chief, Bullhead Bulker (Joe Ryan) has kidnapped and hidden away in the mountains, jump out at her as she is riding through the lonely pass.

She surprises and puts them hors du combat for a short time by throwing face powder in their eyes. While they recover she jumps from her horse and runs up the side of the cliff, holding them at bay with a little automatic revolver. Outnumbered and threatened from the front and rear, she is forced to surrender and is hidden away by the gangsters.

CABINET DEADLOCKED IN COAL SETTLEMENT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Members of the cabinet are unable yet today to agree what would be a fair wage increase for the 400,000 miners who are idle, awaiting the outcome of negotiations here. After discussing the coal situation for three hours the cabinet adjourned until 3:30.

The cabinet members split is due to insistence of Secretary Wilson in his proposal for an increase of approximately 31 per cent necessary to equalize the miners' wages and living costs. Garfield Opposes View.

Fuel Administrator Garfield and others opposed this view. Garfield promised at the second session this afternoon to lay new facts and figures before the cabinet to support his contention.

Miners and operators postponed all joint conferences pending the result of the cabinet meeting.

Matter of Arithmetic.

Fuel Administrator Garfield attended the meeting. Attorney General Palmer strongly endorsed the principles made by Garfield to the miners and operators late yesterday, declaring settlement of the miners' wages is wholly a "matter of arithmetic now."

"The atmosphere needs clearing," and intimated that today's meeting would bring about such clarification.

President Wilson's cabinet met with determination to effect settlement in the coal strike which has kept 400,000 miners idle since November 1.
