These exploded and with such force his pipe that the shell flew cutting the eye by a slit. Friends took him to the hospital at Walla Walla where efforts were made to save the eye but in vain. WAR SERVICE FOR WOMEN REQUIRES HEALTH AND STRENGTH

When was there ever a time when women were doing so much for mankind—and when was the health and strength of our women more vital to the very existence of our country? We can safely say never. Their sacrifices, their industry, their courage, their patriotism is beautiful beyond words of description. But what of the poor one who wants to help but cannot because she is oppressed by some feminine disorder. To such we recommend with utmost confidence our successful old remedy and insert following a letter from one who proved its value.

Newark, N. J.—"For about three years I suffered from nervous breakdown and got so weak I could hardly stand, and had headaches every day. I tried everything I could think of and was under a physician's care for two years. A girl friend had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she told me about it. From the first day I took it, I began to feel better and now I am well and able to do most any kind of work. I have been recommending the Compound ever since and give you my permission to publish this letter."—Miss Flo Kelly, 476 South 14th Street, Newark, N. J.

OPPORTUNITY FOR U. S. CAPITAL IN BALKAN OIL

VIENNA, Dec. 12.—In view of the United Press Staff Correspondent's

VIENNA, Dec. 11.—In view of the general shortage of coal here, the question of the production of other fuel has again become extremely important. Special attention in financial circles is being paid to oil and petroleum which eastern Europe used to produce in abundance.

The exportation and the equal and judicious distribution of the materials, however, is rendered particularly difficult today by the exceptionally grave political situation of the producing countries as well as by the devastation of which this territory was the theatre. This refers above all to the oil wells of Galicia and Roumania, while the oil occurrences of Iraq, on the Caspian Sea, and Kerkuk-Chanikin still deserve the greatest attention in the Far East. The extraordinary abundance of the latter's products was one of the principal reasons why the British naval craft was reconstructed for oil heating.

Reconstruction Vital.

While the petroleum and oil production of Asia is more or less in British hands, already, there ought to be a good opportunity for the investment of American capital in Galicia and Roumania. American business interests, however, must be aware of the fact that one of the most urgent and indispensable tasks in regard to rational exploitation of the oil wells in that part of the world will be their reconstruction, aiming to bring about the pre-war standard of production. While the output of mineral oil in Galicia—which centered in Drobovzye and the neighboring territories—was very great in normal times, a considerable number of wells have been choked and devastated during the course of the numerous battles which took place there between the Russians and the Austrians, even after the armistice and right now this territory is the subject of dispute between the Poles and the Ukrainians; the wells are partly in British and partly in American and Austrian hands.

Roumanian Wells Working.

As to the Roumanian oil wells, a considerable part of these is not now in working order, which is chiefly due to the military measures taken by the allies at the time of the German advance in Roumania. Although General Falkenhayn's experts devoted particular attention to the reconstruction of the destroyed wells, their work was crowned with limited success, and it will take a long period of systematic work to raise the Roumanian oil field again to their pre-war importance. The Roumanian government is trying hard to achieve results in this respect and is reported to have lately concluded a convention with the Austrian government whereby they are to supply the Austrians with petroleum and other material of primary necessity in exchange for industrial products.

There is an exceptional opportunity at the present time for American capital to take an increased active interest in the oil production of Eastern Europe; an activity of this kind on the part of the United States would be very much facilitated, first, by the exceptionally favorable rates of exchange for American coinage in those countries, and second, by the marked readiness of the peoples and governments concerned to co-operate with America and to profit by her efficient business organization.
