Wheat Still in Good Shape

Winter wheat in the county is still facing good prospects and it is too early to worry. John E. Montgomery said today. There are some farms on which seeding will have to be done again in the spring, but these are not confined to any one district. Seeding at the wrong time is blamed for the few failures. The acreage in fall wheat is normal and there will be quite a large amount sown to spring grain, from present indications, he said.
