CONVICT NAMES NOTED CRIMINAL IN SHOOTING

SALEM, Jan. 30.—Charles Gosso in a confession made here recently to Warden Steiner of the state penitentiary and other prison officials, said that an ex-convict known among his companions as "Dutch Pete," shot and wounded Jeff Clark, a watchman, at McMinnville last summer after Clark had been robbed.

Gosso declared that he was residing in Portland at the time of the shooting, and had been invited to drive the automobile in which "Dutch Pete" and members of his gang went to McMinnville. Gosso said he refused to take any part in the affair, but later was told that "Dutch Pete" and his companies were responsible for the shooting.

Although "Dutch Pete" is said to have a long criminal career, it is not believed he ever served a term in the Oregon penitentiary. Gasso was questioned here recently by the McMinnville officials, and is said to have told freely regarding his dealings with "Dutch Pete" and numerous men associated with robberies.

Gosso was committed to the penitentiary from Dallas, Polk county for an indeterminate term of from one to three years for larceny from a dwelling. He is 20 years of age.

MCMINNVILLE, Or., Jan. 30.—Local officers, while satisfied that Pete Stroff, alias "Dutch Pete" is the man that shot off the hand of Night Policeman Clark on the morning of July 6, are working on further clews regarding other accomplices in the affray.

When Sheriff Henderson went to Salem, Gosso gave the version of the shooting affray, which is said to tally well with the details of the event. Stroff, who is in the conty jail, denies his guilt, and asserts he will be able to establish an alibi.
