BON TON CORSETS—THE SOURCE OF STYLE

In every field—there must be a logical leader to point the way to others and to set new standards of style.

BON TON corsets have always led their field and for years—the source of the best and newest in corsetry.

With every touch of fancy mirrored in staple models and every trend of fashion forecasted in latest designs, world-famous modistes of Paris, London and New York plan their great creations over BON TON'S faultless, graceful lines.

Made with the patented O-I-C clasp which does not pinch, break, twist, squeak and always stays flat.

WEARWELL SHEETS AND PILLOW CASES

Most women are as particular about the quality and finish of their bed linens as they are about their table lines.

Wearwell Sheets and Pillow Cases will be found to meet every demand. They wear longest because they are spun from yarn that is smooth and even running, insuring uniform strength throughout the fabric. They have a snow-white bleach and have a soft finish because they are not loaded with adulterations. In all the required sizes.

DAISY MUSLIN

Every housewife who believes that quality is the best economy, will appreciate Daisy Muslin, because it is made to give complete satisfaction.

Daisy Muslin is woven from yarns that are spun from clean, long staple cotton. It is high count—free from artificial weighting matter, bleached pure white and finished soft.

BLIND AND CRIPPLED SHOW QUICK INTEREST IN RUNNING MACHINES

Experiments Were Begun Before Stream of Maimed Began to Pour Back and Now Each Finds Familiar Job.

BY CARL D. GROAT. (United Press Staff Correspondent.) BERLIN, Jan. 21.—German industrial captains are striving to make useful workers of the Teuton war-blind and war-maimed. They have succeeded to such an extent that today a considerable number are engaged in the hitherto supposedly impossible work of running machines which before the war only men with all their faculties operated.

The Siemens-Schuckert works here were the pioneers in trying to salvage maimed men.

Maimed Run Machines. Today, these works believe that they have given an answer to any idea that the war-blind or the war-maimed, except in extraordinary cases, need be solely objects of charity and pity. Working on their drills, presses and boring machines are men totally blind, and in some cases with an arm missing.

Utilization of such cripples has been made possible through the application of special machinery. The Siemens-Schuckert works began their experiment in human salvaging back in 1915 before the stream of maimed and blinded began to pour back so extensively as later.

At that time, people scoffed at the experiment. "Of course," they said, "you can't have a blind man operate a drill or lathe. You may put him to work caring chairs or making brushes, but on this highly technical work it is quite an impossibility."

Siemens-Schuckert leaders paid no attention to this talk, but went ahead to develop machines upon which such men could operate with safety. Special attachments were contrived so that there was no danger to the operator. In fact, it was found that with some kinds of drills, a blind man could operate a pair. And the blind man seemed oftentimes to take a greater interest in his work than a man with all his faculties. Perhaps, because he had pride in being independent rather than an object of charity for the rest of his days.

For instance, certain lathes were equipped with bells which told the blind operator when the material in the lathe had been sufficiently turned. On this machine and on drills and the like there were special guards which prevented the workman from catching his hands in the mechanism.

Put at Familiar Jobs. Then, too, the works made allowances for a man's previous occupation. As an example, it was found that men formerly engaged in locomotive work became ill when confined to operation of heavy labor. These men were transferred to heavier machines which required more strength in manipulation and which required lifting larger loads.

In some cases it was discovered that men were suffering with internal troubles which were aggravated by the vibration and noise of a machine shop. Such men were not adapted to application of the machinist experiment. But, by and large, it is found that war-blind, especially if they have had previous mechanical experience can be

Did Not Lose Skill as Skater When He Lost His Leg in the War

Norman A. Falkner Before he went to war and lost his right leg, Norman A. Falkner was speed skating champion of western Canada and he also excelled as a fancy skater. He is now living at Toronto and has amazed crowds at a rink there by his wonderful feats on the ice. He seems to get leverage by bending his knee and throwing the weight of his body from side to side. He can go forwards or backwards at great speed and can cut out more fancy figures than the average two-legged skater.
