REMOVING $1,500 HOUSE UNCLE SAM SOLD FOR $200 TO NEW SITE WITH MOTOR TRUCK

Uncle Sam helped several hundred Cincinnati families to solve the housing problem. He had built easy four-room cottages with electric light wiring and fixtures, bathroom and built-in kitchen cabinets, near munition plants for the workers and their families. They cost $1,500 each to build but the government sold them for $200 on condition that purchasers remove them to their own lots within sixty days. This photograph shows one of the cottages being drawn to a new site by motor truck. Moving a house in that manner within a radius of five miles cost $130 and a cement block foundation cost $23, making the total cost of a home, except for the lot, $553.
