WILD GUESSES CREATE WHAT WORLD CALLS SUPERSTITION

Man's curiosity is in excess of his power to interpret and understand; consequently he guesses, and when he guesses wildly and inaccurately others of a later date call his guess superstition. Long after people have clearly seen that there is no rational evidence for the thing believed the superstition lingers.

The thirteen at table superstition, which has spread to thirteen of anything is an example. The origin of the prejudice against this number is usually supposed to be the fact that thirteen persons sat down at the Last Supper, after which occurred the most tragic event of the Christian Era.

A God Was Killed.

Hesiod says it is unlucky to sow corn on the thirteenth of the first month, and an old Norse legend says that the twelve great divinities were dining at Valhalla when Loki, the god of discord, appeared, and a quarrel with Balder occurred in which Balder, the god of peace, was killed.

The Friday superstition arose because the crucifixion is supposed to have taken place on that day. Some persons think it is unlucky to spill salt, because Judas Iscariot seems to be spilling it in Da Vinci's picture. Others think that it is because salt is a symbol of incorruptibility, and spilling it is, therefore, a sign of broken friendships and general upsets.

Sneeze Means Evil Spirit.

There are some curious and very widespread customs of a superstitious nature about sneezing. People sometimes say "God bless you!" to the sneezer. In similar circumstances the Romans used to say, "Jupiter preserve you!" The Greeks did the same, and the custom was ancient even in the time of Aristotle, who endeavors to account for it in his Problems; but he evidently knew nothing of its origin.

When a Hindu sneezes the bystanders cry out, "Live!" and the sneezer replies, "With you." The Zulu thinks that sneezing is a sign that good spirits are with him; other peoples believe that it means that evil spirits are being expelled.

The prejudice about being the first occupiers of a new house is perhaps a dim recollection of our prehistoric ancestors' attitude toward a newly discovered cave. There might be wild beasts already in occupation.

Lincoln said on February 22, 1842: "When there shall be neither a slave nor a drunkard on earth—how proud we'll be of that land which may truly claim to be the birthplace and the early home of both those revolutions." The United States, in 75 years, accomplished both.
