REMARK TO PRINCE MAY BRING DOWNFALL OF JAPANESE CABINET

BY HENRY W. KINNEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
TOKYO, April 1.—All of Japan, at least the part that takes an interest in politics, is interested in a scandal which has led Viscount Uchida, Minister for Foreign Affairs, and the most important members of his staff to indicate to the government that if there resignations are wanted, they are willing to step out.

This action follows a certain form of "near-resignation," which accords with Japanese custom, but for which there is no corresponding word in English. It is a step only little removed from an actual resignation, and the affair is regarded as a very serious matter. As soon as it became known that the foreign office was on the verge of an explosion, much speculation was indulged in, and this was heightened when the premier asked the house of peers to refrain from taking up the matter in interpellations or otherwise. The fact that this advice was strictly followed added to the significance of the situation, and when this was followed by strict injunctions from the police, served on the newspapers, forbidding them from publishing certain matters relating to foreign politics, the public stood on tiptoe.

Remark Made to Prince
Various guesses have been indulged in, the disagreement between the foreign office and the ministry of war with regard to the Siberian situation being a favorite one, but it is, as a matter of fact, certain that the question involved is one of international politics, namely no less than a remark which King George of England is said to have made to Prince Saloni, Japan's chief delegate to the Paris Peace conference, when he called at the British court on his way home to Japan.

It is said Prince Saloni reported on his return that King George had told him that he was opposed to any efforts being made for the extradition and trial of the Kaiser. The foreign office gives out periodically to certain favored persons and institutions a sort of bulletin on current events, and the remarks of the king were given as they had been reported to Saloni.
Now it appears that that this was "spilling the beans" with a vengeance. It is not known who protested, whether the original kick came from the British ambassador or from Prince Saloni, but it is likely that the latter was the complainant. As the thing stands, the powers that be admit a serious blunder has been committed by the foreign office, and that the foreign minister, and especially the director of political affairs bureau, are the "guilty."

This version receives practical confirmation from the fact that the Japanese Foreign Office has issued a statement to the effect that the American Food Relief Commission has also official reports of hundreds of people who lived during the last year of the war entirely on roots and stems of maize.

firmation in one of the police notices issued in the newspapers, as follows:

"It is requested that no article regarding the audience granted by King George of England to Marquis Saloni, during his stay in London, be published, as the foreign office deems it injurious to the relationships between Japan and England."

As a consequence of this notice, the newspapers have been extremely guarded in their discussion of the affair. One of them, the Niroku, said: "The foreign office is in serious commotion owing to a question of grave responsibility. It is true that the foreign office authorities have made a serious blunder; if a protest is made by certain countries, the matter will assume serious national importance and the government will have to step down. The question involved is serious enough to compel the resignation of the government, but the opposition should co-operate with the authorities to remedy the case, especially as the diplomatic authorities are repentant of their carelessness and are going to apologize by offering as a victim the director of the political affairs bureau."

In the same connection it is significant that Foreign Minister Uchida a short time ago, in response to an interpellation in the house, stated that there were substantial reasons why the Kaiser should be held responsible for originating the great war, and for this reason Japan had agreed to the insertion in the peace treaty of the clause relating to his punishment.

Made to Measure.
Mrs. Newrich: Don't you think, William, now that we are getting into society that we should have a coat of arms?
Newrich—Certainly, my dear, I'll see my tailor about it tomorrow.—Boston Transcript.
