THEY MAY LOOK ALIKE—BUT WHAT A DIFFERENCE WHEN YOU PUT THEM ON!

In the store, when they are out on the counter, you may say: "I don't see much difference—all knit underwear is about the same, anyway, isn't it?" As a matter of fact, knit undersuits do look very much alike when you see them on the counter, in careless little heaps. How can you tell that one has the shoulders cut straight across instead of slightly sloping, the sides straight down instead of shaped to the figure, the back too broad, so that it bunches, and the waistline either too high or too low? You don't discover these annoying features until you get your underwear home and try it on. Then you look in the mirror and either you groan over the fact that you can't return it, once you've had it on, or you resign yourself to the utter futility of ever getting knit underwear that fits. But suppose you've been clever enough to take the other suit—the little label sewed just inside the top has attracted your eye. The name of Kayser has always stood for the best in silk underwear, hosiery and gloves. It should mean the same in knit underwear. And the moment you put on the Kayser cotton or linen garment you notice that there is a difference. It is soft and fleecy white. You can see that the back is narrower than the front, that the shoulder ribbons of the bodice top suit are real ribbons, strong, durable, good looking, and that they are stitched on to stay. Don't wait until you get home to find out if your underwear is going to fit. Ask a saleswoman in our underwear department to show you Kayser Marvelfit in the first place. If you get your size, it will fit you and it costs no more than ordinary knit underwear.

GIRLS SAY THEY LIKED BOXING EXHIBITIONS; ROUGH STUFF ABSENT

They liked it, did those Pendleton girls and women who saw the fights at the Legion smoker Saturday night. And what's more, they intend to be there if the Legion sponsors another card.

Miss Eva Fay, who attended the smoker as the guest of Buddy Stevens, winner of an eight-round fight with Gene Barzil, says she enjoyed every minute of the events.

"I've seen several fights in Portland," said Miss Fay, "but the smoker Saturday night was the most interesting of all. There was no rough stuff that would offend."

Mrs. Gus Johnson, who attended the smoker with Mr. Johnson, thought the fights were a good exhibition of skill. Mr. Johnson says that from what he observed, it won't take long for the Pendleton women to learn the fine points of the game. Despite a few bloody noses suffered by the fighters, not a single feminine shriek was heard from the grand-stand, although the ladies lifted their voices in praise of the winners.

"There was absolutely nothing offensive about the fights," said a Pendleton girl who attended her first boxing contest Saturday night. "It was wonderfully exciting to watch the men in the ring. I was especially interested in the light-weights; they were certainly quick on their feet. And I didn't mind the bloody noses because I've seen them before."

"I notice there is one class of people that is not saying very much about the high cost of living, and that is the farmer."—President Moton, of Tuskegee.

JEWETT IS NAMED STATE BIOLOGIST

PORTLAND, Ore., April 13.—Stanley Jewett, formerly of Pendleton, predatory animal inspector of the U. S. Biological Survey in Oregon, was yesterday elected state biologist at the first joint meeting of the new fish and game commission.

State Game Warden Carl D. Shoemaker tendered his resignation, effective May 1, in order that he might become executive secretary of the fish commission, and Captain A. E. Burghdoff, overseas veteran, was appointed to take his place. These changes are in accordance with the plans of the commission for the complete segregation of the commercial and game interests hitherto handled from one office of the state fish and game commission.

Mr. Jewett resided in Pendleton until a week ago when the Survey office was moved from Pendleton to Portland. William Finley, formerly state biologist, is a close friend of Mr. Jewett's and the two have been on many expeditions together getting specimens and filming animals and birds life for the famous Finley pictures.

Mr. Jewett has attained success as a biologist and has written several articles which have been published in scientific magazines. His private collection of birds and mammals is unequalled by any on the Pacific coast and by few in the United States.

100 ENJOY WOODMAN SMOKER AND BANQUET

One hundred Woodmen and invited friends enjoyed a smoker and banquet in the lodge rooms last evening. Musical and athletic entertainment, addresses and refreshments formed the program, which was in charge of C. A. Saunders, Dan O'Donnell and Ralph Buckley.

R. C. Lawrence entertained with a reading and song. The Pendleton colored quartet gave several selections and there were two acts of vaudeville from the Alta. A blindfolded boxing match between Jack Childs and Ralph Buckley created a lot of amusement, as neither man knew he was to be put in the ring. A pillow fight with these two and six other contestants, H. P. Livermore, A. Copeland, Eddie Rayburn, D. V. Livermore, P. M. Struble and C. A. Saunders followed. P. A. Beard delivered an address, which was followed by adjournment to the banquet room and refreshments.

"What a beautiful job for a retired man to be janitor to a volcano," is one of Clemenceau's reflections during his vacation.

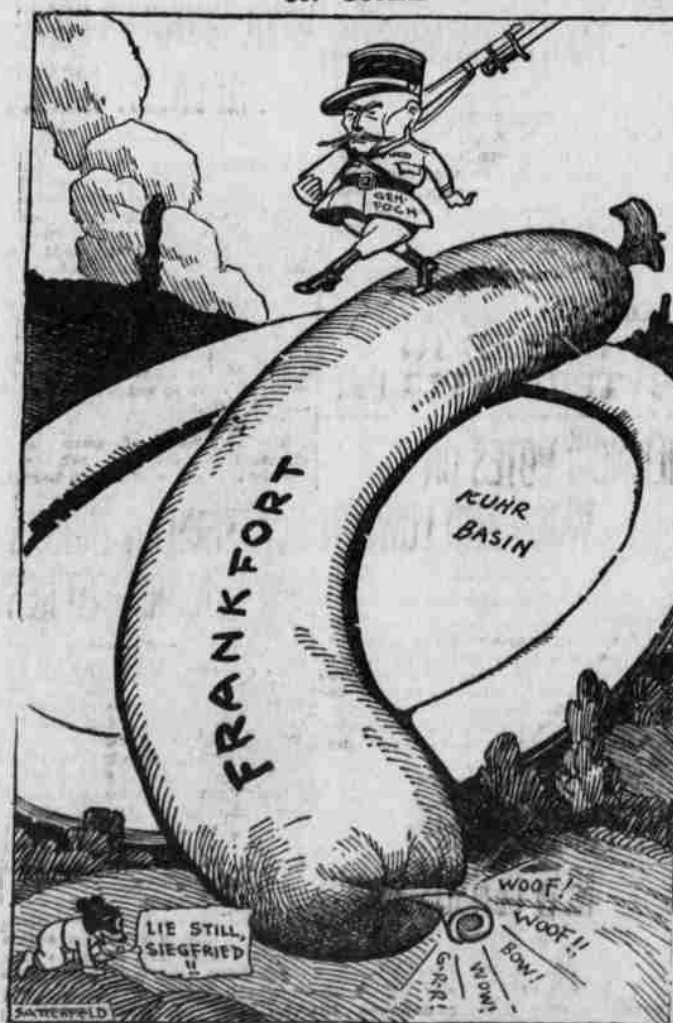

It is unfortunate that a meeting has not been arranged between Sir Oliver Lodge and the former Kaiser who is seeing visions with greater and greater frequency of late.
