What the play-house managers have to tell you about present and coming attractions.

ARCADE TODAY

The bestial nature of a libertine officer, formerly of the Austrian army, is relentlessly exposed in "Blind Husbands," the Universal photodrama of the Tyrolean Alps, which comes to the Arcade Theatre tomorrow.

This principal role is played by Eric Stroheim, former lieutenant of the Austrian army; and in "Blind Husbands" Eric Stroheim portrays the arrogance and supreme conceit that made the Tyrolean until for the commission of crimes.

As a lieutenant of the Austrian army the starting villain goes to a fashionable resort in the Alps to prey on womankind. There he meets Margaret Armstrong, who is a loved but badly neglected wife.

Dr. Armstrong makes a discovery, suspects something worse, and his soul is seared and tortured when the lieutenant lives to him. The fate of a love-husband in the form of a man, is the theme of the story.

Stroheim is remembered, even hated, by thousands of persons, for his portrayal of a Hun officer in the big "Universal" war picture, "The Heart of Humanity."

Supporting him in "Blind Husbands" as Margaret Armstrong, the wife, is Francisca Billington and the following cast of popular Universal players: Sam DeGrasse, H. Gibson, Galloway, Valeria Geronzi and Jack Berlin.

"Blind Husbands" is pronounced as a daring photodrama, based on the days immediately following the war, which cannot but open the eyes of the cynical American husband to the danger of indifference toward the woman he selected as his life mate. It is declared to be a masterpiece in its handling of so vital a theme.

The great benefit derived from the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been gratefully acknowledged by many. Mrs. Benjamin F. I gave it to my children when small for colds and have taken it myself."

How Is Your Complexion?

A woman should grow more beautiful as she grows older and she will with due regard to baths, diet and exercise, and by keeping her liver and bowels in good working order. If you are haggard and yellow, your eyes losing their lustre and whites becoming yellowish, your flesh flabby, it may be due to indigestion or to a sluggish liver. artist; a famous lawyer in New York always thought he would have been a great newspaperman and so on. There is a well-known motion picture star, who even though, one of the most popular among the fans today on the screen, has always had the impression that he should have been a grand opera artist.

He is Antonio Moreno, star of the latest Vitaphone serial, "The Invisible Hand," a great detective mystery story now showing at the Pastime Theatre. Moreno has played many famous stories. But he says he would have foregone them all for a chance to play Don Juan, the torador in the opera, Carmen. And he still has hopes that he will have a chance. Physically temperamental and by birth Moreno is built for the part. As is well known, the opera is a Spanish one. Moreno is a Spaniard—a descendant of real Castilian stock. He has the fiery black eyes and raven hued hair of the Don and that he would have all the emotion and ability to portray the role of Don Juan the fans themselves are assured by his past performances.

ALTA TODAY

WHAT KIND OF A GIRL IS PINK TEA GIRL?

What kind of a girl is a pink tea girl? According to the Vitaphone's newest Bessie Love picture, she is a girl who doesn't know her own heart. Bessie Love isn't that kind of a serious girl, but in this picture she has a sister who is, and it's up to Miss Love, cast as the heroine, to straighten out love problems.

The picture is "Over the Garden Wall," which will be seen at the Alta theatre today. Miss Love, as Peggy Gordon, is the daughter of a moderately wealthy, studious book-loving father. She is a girl who rides into life with vim and nerve and energy. Her sister Frances, can dawdle the lawnces and all the other fancy dainties, as the saying goes, but can't do much else.

The love affairs of Frances, and her idolatry for fine clothes and pink teas give Peggy an awful lot of work, but they cause this wisp of a girl to find out her own love destiny. That's worth a million dollars, isn't it?

Well, anyhow, Peggy sails into the romance of "Over the Garden Wall" with bare fists, as the saying goes, and they all live happily ever after, as the saying is; er, it's a love-dovey kind of a picture.

AMUSEMENTS

OREGON THEATRE

"There's just as good fish in the sea as ever jumped off from the hook," says Abe Potash in the greatest American comedy ever written. Abe and his partner, "Mawruss" Perlmutter are two of the greatest delinquents of the Hebrew in business that has ever been drawn. When Montague Glass began his series of stories in the Saturday Evening Post they sprang into immediate favor with the people of the United States. Insistence became the demands for the dramatization of these sketches of real business life, and in response the first of the series was brought out under the name of "Potash and Perlmutter." In the eastern cities the success of the play was phenomenal and the third edition is now ready for the public. However the author put into this comedy such a wealth of laughter provoking sayings and situations that the following comedies seem lifeless besides the first. This standard story of Montague Glass will be given a real production at the Oregon theatre next Friday and Saturday nights by The Fred Hiegel Stock Company. This most excellent company has been giving the people of Pendleton some of the best plays ever witnessed in the city and the excellence of their productions is the only guarantee needed for the coming offering of "Potash and Perlmutter." Reserve seats today that you may not be disappointed for the Oregon theatre is not going to hold the crowd that will want to attend.

When the Saturday Evening Post accepts the writings of an author for publication, it means but one thing. The best that can be obtained in that particular line. So when Montague Glass wrote a series of short stories dealing with the business life of two Yiddish merchants, and they were accepted by the Saturday Evening Post, and announced for publication, the people knew they were going to receive something out of the ordinary. The stories made an instantaneous hit, and the fame of "Potash and Perlmutter" immediately spread over the English reading portion of the globe. So great was their reception, so clever were they written, so humorous were the sayings and doings of these two Hebrew merchants, that popular clamor demanded a comedy.

The Most Enthralling Picture Drama that the Art has ever produced

Stroheim's Wonder-Play

Directed by Stroheim himself

"BLIND HUSBANDS"

THE Editor of PHOTOPLAY, probably the foremost authority in the country on the merits of moving pictures, says that of all the pictures he has seen this year, "BLIND HUSBANDS" is one of the three best. "BLIND HUSBANDS" has fewer explanatory titles than any big picture ever made—which means that its story is so absorbing and so flawlessly acted that explanation is almost unnecessary. The plot, involving the destiny of a wife, a husband and another man, is very simple but so absolutely gripping that once you see the deadly peril into which it is leading, nothing short of a million dollars could make you take your eyes from the screen. And towards the end of this picture you'll have the biggest surprise you ever had in your life. See it now—then tell your friends. Don't let them miss it.
