SCHOOL OF MUSIC POPULAR

A number of the Pendleton students at the University of Oregon are taking work in the school of music which is now enjoying the greatest year of its existence, both in point of numbers and in the popularity of the courses offered. Last year nearly 1,000 students availed themselves of the advantages offered by the school, while the enrollment this year promises to exceed that record by at least 25 per cent.

The faculty of the school of music is particularly strong both as to academic and technical training and represents the best educational institutions of this and foreign countries. In addition professional in Portland are affiliated with the University.

Organized each year on a competitive basis and open to all who qualify are the orchestra of thirty pieces, the Ladies Glee Club of twenty-two voices, and the Men's Glee Club of twenty, which recently sang in Pendleton, all of which are giving concerts this season. In addition to this, there are several city choirs, a large community chorus, and an opera chorus for the benefit of all those possessing even a moderate ability to sing.

The course in public school music has become deservedly popular for it combines the theoretical instruction of the classroom with actual experience in the presentation of the subject to pupils of grammar and high school age.

There are few universities which are more liberal and thoroughly modern in the amount of recognition given to the serious student of music. It is possible for one to pursue the regular course leading to a Bachelor of Music degree or to major in music toward the degree of Bachelor arts.

LAD IS HONOR GUEST

The Salem Statesman describes in the following way a party planned for a little honor guest well known in Pendleton where he has often visited during the past year:

Mrs. C. D. Gabrielsen entertained with a smart children's party Wednesday afternoon for her grandson, Charles Kay Bishop, to celebrate his 7th birthday anniversary. Games made the afternoon a happy one for the party and late in the afternoon Mrs. Gabrielsen, assisted by Mrs. Clifford Brown, served a dainty lunch. The centerpiece for the table around which the guests were seated was a wonderful Jack Horner pie which was made in a huge pink rose and tiny ribbons were placed to each cover on the end of which a clever little favor was found. The guests were 12 friends of the young honor guest: Chester Olooff, Thomas Liveston, Thomas Norton, Thomas Evin, Tom Bishop of Portland, Edwin Cross, Frank Cross, Sonny Spears, Charles Bier, Billy Dyer, Gordon Barr and Werner Brown.

Two Kinds of Dental Ethics

UNDER old-style ethics, a dentist who advertised was a quack. The only way a dentist could be ethical was to sit tight, say nothing and keep the masses ignorant.

Under new-style ethics, it is a dentist's highest duty to advertise dentistry so the people may know all about the dangers of bad teeth and the blessings of good teeth. The new style is followed by Registered Dentists who use the E. R. Parker System in their practice.

Under this System you get better dentistry for less money—dentistry without the fear of pain—dentistry with fewer visits—dentistry where each patient is treated by a man who is skilled in the kind of dental work each patient needs.

Which kind of ethics do you think is best—the kind that tells you nothing or the kind that tells you everything?
