WRATHY HORNET CLIMBS IN AUTO AND MALEFACTOR GETS IT IN THE NECK

Bees and their relatives, yellow-jackets, are queer insects. None other than W. A. "Dusty" Rhodes has come to this conclusion. The realization came about rather painfully.

During the progress of a grouse hunt on Sunday in the hills, bees, hornets, yellow-jackets, wasps or whatever they were, buzzed merrily about the hunting party of which Mr. Rhodes was a member. They could be shoed away without resistance but they persisted in stinging near. All got home without being given a souvenir from the bee family.

Yesterday morning Mr. Rhodes went into his garage to get his car, and in removing some articles from within, disturbed a yellowjacket which had come home with the party. His Sunday good behavior, however, he forgot and proceeded to inject his stinger into Mr. Rhodes' neck. Thus ended the tale of the yellowjacket.

North Carolina Senate Begins Debate With Expectation of Voting Before Session Ends; Outcome is Still Clouded.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 17.—(U. P.)—The house adjourned today without acting on the suffrage amendment.

Aides Are Jammed

NASHVILLE, Aug. 17.—The battle over suffrage opened in the Tennessee house today when Rev. Riddick moved that the house concur in the senate resolution ratifying the amendment. A motion to suspend the rules so the spectators could remain lost by 51 to 45, a two thirds vote being necessary.

Representative Boyer argued that it would degrade the women to give them the vote. "I have nine daughters and eight sons," he said, "and do not feel that those daughters should have the vote." This brought a round of applause. "Giving the negroes the vote was the worst thing that ever happened to them," he said.

Representative Canale declared that women will purify American politics. Sharpe said he would not vote for suffrage due to the large negro population in other states of the south.
