IN THE RUSHING RACE.

(By Frank L. Stanton.)

In the rushing race for office he laid 'em on the shelf,
But, running everlastingly, he couldn't stop himself.
John Gilpin never flew
On the nag the village knew,
Like that chap! The world went dizzy when the race it tried to view,
Springtime and summer he went bold and blind;
Kept the dust a-flying on the fellows far behind,
Never time to stay,
'Twas "People, clear the way
And I reckon he'll be running when they blow for Judgment Day!"

A GREAT HUMAN ISSUE

"If Cox is not elected it will be hard for me to believe there is a God in heaven," said a prominent businessman recently. He meant exactly what he said and his expression was prompted chiefly by Harding's fight against the League of Nations.

Is there not plenty of ground for that expression. There is overwhelming evidence that the fight against the league in America is based on politics. There is nothing wrong with the league covenant excepting that it has been maligned and misrepresented by politicians and a party serving press. Proof of this is found in the fact almost every republican leader was a supporter of the league until the Lodge-Harding coterie made the thing a political issue in order to have some grounds for a fight against President Wilson.

What of the morality of men who were willing to do such a thing after the catastrophe through which the world has just passed. There are ten million graves that would not exist if in 1914 there had been a League of Nations. There are millions and millions of starved and orphaned children because of the war. Their sacrifice was needless and should never occur again. There are now 41 nations of the earth banded together under the League of Nations pledged to prevent such slaughter in the future. The one great purpose of the league is to stop warfare and to this end all are pledged to stand against an aggressor. The circle is complete save for the United States and we would have been in the league long ago had not the Lodge-Harding group of senators decided to make a political football out of the treaty and the covenant.

The senate oligarchy has kept this country out of the league and they are trying by means of deliberate and premeditated falsehoods to keep the country out permanently.

If they can get away with that can you blame men for losing faith in God?

TWENTY MILLION WOMEN

WHEN Tennessee cast the vote that ratified the nineteenth amendment her action added 20,000,000 new voters to the American electorate. Connecticut's action clinched this result. About twenty-six million women in all will be entitled in the coming election to express their choice of candidates by ballot.

The right of suffrage is an old story to man and in exercising his right he has not always been painstaking in informing himself upon issues and the fitness of the men who seek his support. Will the women voters follow suit? Or will she take her political opinions on faith from her men folk and so give the nineteenth amendment no more significance than that of a mere doubling of the voting strength of parties without disturbing the ratio?

The war brought to woman a greatly enlarged sphere and a realizing sense of her own independence. It made her conscious of the truth that without any sacrifice of the dignity of woman she could take a part that would contribute to the winning of the war. This consciousness gave a tremendous impetus to the cause of woman suffrage. When men realized that a great majority of women desired the ballot they freely gave it to them. Now that she has her first opportunity to put to the test her newly acquired right she is eager to give proof that she is prepared to make an intelligent use of it and is losing no opportunity to equip herself to that end. How well will she succeed.

Walla Walla would be the chief beneficiary by the proposed road from Umatilla to Wallula. The road would mean nothing to Oregon unless perhaps the loss of some business to our neighboring state. That a scheme of this sort should be seriously suggested while the whole state is crying for roads that are truly needed, seems beyond understanding.

The action of the federal reserve banks in restricting credits to essential loans has been largely responsible for bringing autos and other manufactured products down from the skies. The reserve system is working well and should not be tampered with by politicians catering to Wall street.

HARDING OPPOSED MEASURE TO TAX BIG WAR PROFITS

Opposed Almost Every Move
Made With Aim of Reaching
Men Who Make Fortunes
During War.

BY WARD A. IRVINE

PORTLAND, Sept. 29.—Senator Harding's fidelity to the great corporations of the country and to those of large incomes will be exposed to the people of Oregon, among other things, by scores of speakers who are soon to go into every corner of the State, Cox headquarters announced this morning. The speakers will show that the votes of the Ohio Senator were invariably cast against the excess profits tax, against increasing the tax on war profits, and against increasing the taxes on those with incomes above $1,000,000 a year.

Senator Harding's record of loyalty to the big corporations is one of the most striking in the history of American political life," is the statement of Dr. E. T. Hedlund, Malheur County Chairman, in telling of the plan to expose the Harding record. "It leaves no question as to whom Harding thinks should bear the cost of government in the United States. Our speakers will tell the story of the Harding votes to the people of Oregon before November."

The story runs like this: An amendment was offered to the revenue bill providing for the elimination of $406,250,000 in consumption taxes, taxes collected from the whole public, the deficit to be made up by increased taxes on war profits and on incomes in excess of $5000. Senator Harding voted against the amendment.

Another amendment provided for a 75 per cent tax on war profits. Harding voted against it.

Another provided for a 70 per cent tax on war profits. Harding voted against it.

Another provided for a 65 per cent tax on war profits. Harding voted against it.

Another provided for a 60 per cent tax on war profits. Harding voted against it.

Another provided for a 50 per cent tax on war profits. Harding voted against it.

He voted against four amendments providing that the tax on large corporation incomes be increased.

He voted against raising the rate of tax on the larger incomes, and voted against raising the rate to 50 per cent on incomes in excess of $1,000,000.

Although Harding invariably voted against increasing the taxes on war profits, and those of larger incomes, individuals or corporations, he didn't want the farming and professional corporations to be exempted from income taxes. He voted against exempting them, and he voted against giving publicity to income tax returns and to profiteering.

His attitude on the subject of taxation is defined in an address in the Senate on February 26, 1919. He said: "I for one am speaking in opposition to the pending revenue bill because of the two hundred and twenty-six millions of unfair, unjust, unreasonable and uncalled-for class tax upon the great corporations of the land."

Speaking on the excess profits tax, he said:

"I want to put into the record, Mr. President, that this tax in the first place is not necessary; that it is revolutionary; it is unfair; it is sectional in character; it is distinctly class legislation, and not designed but well inclined to discourage success; and then, in the last analysis, it is utterly impracticable to collect it along lines of just application."

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS COVENANT

Article 4 of the Covenant published below, creates the council of the League of Nations, the first effective agency for world peace ever devised and consummated. If the United States were a member of the League, it would head this council, which must be unanimous before it can commit the league on important matters of world policy. Here is Article 4:

"The council shall consist of representatives of the United States of America, of the British empire, of France, of Italy, and of Japan, together with representatives of four other members of the league. These four members of the league shall be selected by the assembly from time to time in its discretion. Until the appointment of the representatives of the four members of the league first selected by the assembly, representatives of Belgium, Brazil, Greece and Spain shall be members of the council."

"With the approval of the majority of the assembly, the council may name additional members of the league whose representatives shall always be members of the council, the council with like approval may increase the number of members of the league to be selected by the assembly for representation on the council."
