Elk are increasing rapidly in the forest, says Mr. Bottcher, who saw more elk than deer.

Arrangements have been made to accommodate a large number of parents at this lecture, which will be held in the auditorium of Pendleton high school. It is free to all who wish to attend.

DEATH OF GURDANE

Mr. Gurdane served in the state conventions and nearly all of the county conventions, and was at one time republican state central committeeman from Umatilla. In 1894 he was elected to the state legislature, and because of his record, he was re-elected at the end of the term. Mr. Gurdane was the son of John S. and Elizabeth Gurdane, natives of Scotland, and was born on the sea off Sandy Hook, while his parents were en route to the United States. His early days were spent in New York and Canada, and when but a small child he was adopted by Thomas and Elizabeth Lundy. At the age of 15 he took up a sea-faring life and spent 30 years at this occupation, visiting all the leading ports of the world.

Ship and Cargo Go Down

In 1846 he enlisted in the navy, serving for five years and four months. He filled all of the offices in the merchant marine, and at one time owned a half interest in a good vessel, being captain and manager. In the heavy gales of 1853 ship and cargo went down and Mr. Gurdane lost all he possessed.

With money borrowed from a friend Mr. Gurdane went to Mobile, Alabama, working as captain on a lighter until the Civil War broke out. He had married in 1856 Miss Janette Smith, whom he left in Racine, Wisconsin, going into service as first mate on the Sweepstakes, continuing there until 1861, when he resigned and enlisted in Company E, Fourteenth Wisconsin Infantry.

Veteran of Many Battles

His first fighting was skirmishing at Fort Donelson, and the first heavy battle was at Shiloh, where they suffered heavy loss. Following this he participated in the siege of Corinth, then fought at Iuka, and in the fall of 1862 was two days in the battle of Corinth. A few weeks later he did valiant service in the battle of Cold Water in the Mississippi.

A year later he fought in the battle of Port Gibson, also in the battle of Champion Hills and at Black River. He was in the heavy charge at Vicksburg May 22, when his company went in with 377 men and 10 minutes later came out with a loss of 107 men. It was at this time that he was wounded. In 1863, he re-enlisted in the veteran service, taking place in the same company. After a 30 day furlough at home, he went to Lookout Mountain, participating in all the heavy battles to Big Shantee, being able to hear the musketry and cannonading for 90 days thereafter.

Gun is Shot from Hands

July 23, 1864, he was in the battle of Peach Creek, and was on Leggett near where General McPherson was killed. Here Gurdane's gun was shot from his hands and a bullet struck his cartridge box, shocking him badly. He secured another gun and continued in the fight. Following this the regiment marched to Eastport, and after the fall of Atlanta they proceeded to Jonesboro and fought a heavy battle. Then he joined Sherman's forces to the sea, where he was put in charge of the pontoon construction.

Following the fall of Fort McAllister they marched from Savannah to Raleigh, North Carolina, skirmishing much on the way, as the crossing of every stream was contested. After this they went to Alexandria, and prepared for the grand review at Washington. He was mustered out at Mobile, Alabama, in 1865.

Pioneer Goes West

Returning to his family, he remained for two days and then shipped as first mate on the William Vanderbilt laying her up December 5 in Buffalo. Returning home, he immediately engaged to ship wagons for the Mitchell Co. and the following March removed to Shelby county, Missouri, where he engaged in farming and railroading until he crossed the plains to Oregon.

Mr. Gurdane was the father of the following children: Ann Jane, Douglas C., Nettie A., John W. (now deceased) and Thomas B. The latter was born after his marriage to his second wife, formerly Miss Cella McBroom. His first wife died in 1866.
