ARIZONA THEATRE IS NEARING COMPLETION

NOGALES, Ariz., Nov. 2.—(A. P.)—The biggest auditorium in Arizona, so described by the architect, is nearing completion at Camp Stephen D. Little here, where the 25th Infantry is stationed, having been built completely by hitherto uneducated negro soldiers in the 25th Infantry studying in the army vocational school at the post under direction of Major John C. Fairfax, morale officer.

The new building is a complete theater, equipped for either motion pictures, vaudeville, or legitimate productions. The seating capacity is 2000.

Present plans call for opening the new theater by Christmas day. The theater will be conducted by men at the army post, from publicity man to scene shifters. The building is of wood construction. The lumber was obtained by the morale officer from the salvage material of the U. S. reclamation service. Practically the entire work has been done by 25 soldier students in the vocational school at the post. None of them, they stated to Maj. Fairfax, had ever handled carpenter's tools when they began the course last November. Many of these men could not even read and write when they entered the school.
