BOY SCOUT MOVEMENT IS REVIVED IN MEXICO

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 5.—(A. P.)—The Boy Scout movement in Mexico is being revived. A call has been issued by the leaders of the movement, for all lads between twelve and seventeen years of age to present themselves for enrollment.

The Boy Scouts, or "The Corps of Mexican Explorers," as they are called here, formerly enjoyed a number of privileges from the government which provided them with uniforms, shoes, and even a small money allowance to pay their expenses during their excursions.

During the revolution, the movement virtually ceased. It is planned to give it new impulse along the lines formerly followed.
