THE BOOK SHELF

Children's Book Week

As this is "Children's Book Week" throughout the country, librarians are emphasizing better books for children, and book dealers, who co-operate, are putting on sale the highest grade of reading matter for the children.

Children's book week as a national campaign was organized in 1919 on the initiative of the American Bookseller's Association and has the co-operation of the American Library Association, the Boy Scouts of America, and the General Federation of Women's Clubs. The success of the Week in 1919 has caused a demand for its repetition, and the week will be an annual affair.

"Oh, he has counsel at his side, And wisdom for his duty, And laughter gay for hours of play And tenderness and beauty, And fellowship divinely rare, True friends who never doubt him, Unchanging love, and God above, Who keeps good books about him."

—EDGAR A. GUEST.

This week at the County Library the children's room has been crowded with children both afternoon and night. Each child brings the "Home Reading List" which was given out in the schools this week from which they are reading in order to get a Home Reading Certificate. The library book number is printed on the lists after each title and the children are taught to find the books on the shelves and thus become acquainted with library arrangement and quickly feel at home in library surroundings.

"The Best Gift"

A Christmas poem by one of our Oregon authors is most appropriate at this time of the year and in connection with Children's Book Week. Mrs. Elkin Starrett of Portland is the author. Her book "The Charm of Fine Manners" is on the Freshman Home Reading List, though well suited for grades both higher and lower. Other books by this author are "After college, what?" and "Crocus and wintergreen" from which this poem is taken.

What shall you give me, dear? Now that the happy time For the giving of gifts is near, And the bells of Christmas chime? Friend of the steadfast eyes, Friend of the loving look, Quickly my heart replies: Always give me a book.

For you and I know, dear heart, As the swift-winged years go by, And the valours of youth depart, And the waiting days draw nigh, What joy and cheer may come In the quiet fireside nook— The strife of the world shut out— With a shaded lamp and a book.

Then, to our silent room Come sounds of the wood and seas, Twitter of Joyous birds, Hum of the summer bees— Lovers whose bliss we share; Heroes whose brave deeds thrill Our hearts with the fires of youth; Poets whose visions fill.

Our souls with a joy sublime— Infinite hope and desire— Till the bonds of earth and time, The burdens that chafe and tire, Are loosed in the vision bright, And our souls transfixed stand, Illumed with the golden light, That was "never on sea or land."

Oh, infinite fields of thought, Where, free from earth's stress and thrall, We walk with the souls who have wrought,

Who have braved and conquered all; Have won from sorrow and pain, From struggle, defeat, and loss, Snow from the crimson stain, Crowns from the bitter cross.

These are the souls we meet, And with them joy and aspire, As we sit by their sacred fire, By the quiet evening fire, So, friend of the steadfast heart, Friend of the loving look, When you would give me a gift, Always give me a book.
