LUMBER AND FISH

THE standing timber of Oregon is variously estimated at from 300 to 400 billion feet. Washington has a little less. The entire Pacific coast—California, Oregon, Washington and British Columbia—has, say 1,000 billion feet.

A cut of 20 billion a year is probably as much as we could reasonably expect to have and $15 a thousand for all labor would give us an income from the timber industry on this coast in ten or twenty years from now of $300,000,000 per year. The business is of sufficient magnitude to encourage students in our different colleges to take special courses for the logging and for the milling and handling of this large industry. It is a resource well worth conserving.

The fishing industry on the Pacific coast at the present time amounts to $50,000,000 per annum. This industry, if properly taken care of, will show a constant increase instead of a decrease, and the persons engaged in this industry 50 years hence will be many times as great as are employed at the present time.

Japan, with less than one-half of the shore frontage that we have, and certainly with less than one-half of the fish supply, employs 200,000 boats in the fishing industry. Over three million of its inhabitants are engaged in the industry; and Dr. Hugh Smith, who has written an able article upon this in a fishing report, estimates that there are over ten million Japanese dependent upon the fishing industry for their existence. The Japanese consume annually from 50 to 60 pounds of fish food per capita and less than ten pounds of other meats. It becomes absolutely necessary for Japan to conserve her fishing industry; she could not exist without it.

In the United States our agriculturists estimate that it requires 150 pounds of meat per year per capita to sustain our American population. This supply is growing constantly less, the prices are growing higher and individuals are forced to subsist on less. In twenty-five years from now it will be absolutely impossible for America to secure 100 pounds of meat per capita. Already the shipments of meats from America to England have been practically discontinued. The preservation of our fishing industry for the maintenance of food supply is of far more importance to our future generations than the maintenance of our Pacific coast timber, and it is reasonable to expect that in twenty-five years from now the fishing industry will excel the lumber industry in magnitude, and it is possible for the fish of the Pacific coast, if properly preserved, to support a larger population than is now living here.

We are giving some attention to our hatcheries, to the propagating and preserving of our fish. This is absolutely necessary. Our schools might take up a fishing course as well as a forestry course. To properly conserve this industry, in ten years more it will require one million dollars year year to maintain our hatcheries. We ought to have men specially prepared to take charge of this great work. Our hatcheries should always employ young men specially trained for the business, as the forestry department does, instead of employing unskilled labor. German technical colleges have for many years maintained a most complete course on fish culture and fishing. The new Canadian universities announce a similar course. America should not lag behind.

People from all over this county and in fact from all over the west have contributed to the Til Taylor memorial fund. It is due these contributors that the fund be used for strictly memorial purposes. The use of the money for any selfish purpose by Pendleton would arouse justifiable criticism that would be embarrassing. We are capable of making any local improvements that may be called for and to serve such ends there is no occasion for any procedure that might be questionable in character.

Centuries ago a noted Roman historian discussing criticisms of Alexander the Great, said they were chiefly based on the antipathy of second rate minds for a man with a first class mind. Future historians will say the same thing of those who carp so much at Woodrow Wilson.

Many people would be more ready to excuse the big packers if they would make some real bacon once more. The stuff they now turn out is too much like fresh pork dipped in water.

The dope seems to favor a stop in the declining price of wheat but these are days when the dopsters may easily go wrong in their calculations.

Many cities are experiencing unusual criminal activity this winter. A good time to have policemen and sheriffs who are on their toes.

S. Benson rendered a good service to this county when he insisted that the Echo-Pendleton highway follow the Umatilla river.

Get your Red Cross bundle ready; there are those who can make good use of your cast off clothing.

Largest Stock Turnover This Year Takes Place
NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Hopes of better conditions in the stock market Friday were soon dispelled, the reaction of the past three weeks making additional headway after an initial period of comparative steadiness. Sales amounted to 1,500,000 shares, the largest turnover, with one or two exceptions, this year.
More than 100 industrials and special issues were at lowest quotations for the year. U. S. Steel added another fraction to its minimum for three years and Bethlehem Steel was lower than since 1915. In general Friday reversals cancelled all gains for the last two years.
Steeels were the weakest issues. Granite breaking ten points and regaining only 1 1/2, with a net loss of 2 1/2 for Bethlehem.

THE FUNNYBONE

Alas, Poor Hamlet!
Director—"Would you be willing to accept a minor part for your first appearance in the pictures? To accustom yourself, as it were?"
Dramatic star—"Ye gods! I—I—I—that have played Kings and Princes in the time essay role of a nondescript miner and wear a lantern on me brow that has worn the crown and the laurel!"

Director—"No, no! You don't understand. I mean a small part—a minor role—an insignificant part—a minor role—strangely enough, the part is the kind you are familiar with—a Prince—Hamlet."

Dramatic Star—"What! the tragic Dane an insignificant part! Prithree, tell me, if Hamlet be a small part, what is the star role?"

Director—"Why, Verick. You see, we resurrect him for our star funny man and run the play as a straight comedy."—Film Fun.

Judging the Depth.
An English rider, coming to a river he was unfamiliar with, asked a youngster he saw playing on the bank if it was deep. "No," replied the boy but soon found that he and his horse had to swim for their lives.
When finally he reached the other side he turned and shouted: "I thought you said it wasn't deep."
"It aren't," was the reply. "It only takes grandfather's ducks up to their middles!"—Boston Transcript.

Stopped Him Too Soon.
A certain caddy, although ordinarily his speech was quite normal, was apt to stammer badly when excited or surprised.
One day he was caddying for a well-known player, who on arriving at the seventh hole—a particularly difficult one—remarked:
"I did this hole in three the other day."
"What?" ejaculated the caddy.
"Well, sir, all I can say is that you are a 1-1-1!"
"Steady, boy, steady!" interrupted the player, reprovingly.
"You're a 1-1-1-lucky man, sir," concluded the stammering caddy.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

A Change of Tire.
Mrs. Speedup—Hello mother! We're a bit late, but we had to stop on the road to change a tire.
Her mother—You should have come just as you were and changed your attire in your room here instead of out on the open road.—Houston Post.

A Personal Misfortune.
"Just because your candidate was defeated, you don't think the country is going to pot, do you?"
"No," said the melancholy citizen.
"Don't. But since my candidate promised me a job if he got elected, I don't see what's to prevent me from going to pot."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The Irish of It.
A gentleman was walking along a country lane one day when he was startled to see a man's head appear above the dirty water in the ditch.
"Why, Pat," he exclaimed, "what are you doing there?"
The Irishman smiled sheepishly.
"Well, sir, being tired of life, I am trying to drown meself!"
"But why, then, do you keep putting your head out of the water for?"
"Shure, now," replied Pat, "I have to keep coming up to get my breath!"—London Answers.

LITHUANIA PLOTS TO JOIN RUSSIA IN WAR
PARIS, Nov. 22.—(U. P.)—Representatives of Lithuania are now in Moscow negotiating with the Russian government for a military offensive against Poland, according to advices received from the soviet capital today.

MEXICO TO REFUSE TO ADMIT SENATOR FALL
WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—(A. P.)—Mexican consuls on the border have been directed to refuse to issue passports to Senator Fall on his proposed visit to Mexico City for the inauguration of President-elect Obregon, the Mexican embassy has announced.

ANTI-BOLSHEVIK LEADER HAS ABANDONED TROOPS
RIGA, Nov. 22.—(U. P.)—Ukrainian opposition to Russian troops has disintegrated, according to a Moscow wireless today. It is stated that General P. Jethira, anti-bolshevik leader, has abandoned his troops, which is expected to dissolve immediately. The Polish-Russian peace negotiations were broken off here yesterday, the Russian delegates declaring that Poland violated the armistice terms regarding disposition of troops.

St. George And The Dragon
Equipments followed the course of steels and oils and motors also were weak, with food, tobacco and chemical shares. Mexican Petroleum lost 5 1/4; Royal Dutch 2 1/4; Baldwin Locomotive 2 1/4; Studebaker 3 1-8; American Sugar and Industrial Alcohol 1 1/2 each and Corn Products 3 points. Shippers made feeble recoveries but investment rates, notably Reading and Northern Pacific reacted at the feverish end.

On the surface no new elements entered into the general situation, which was characterized by further disturbances in cotton, grain and other leading staples.
Bonds went the way of stocks although losses were relatively light a few liberty issues closing at actual gains. Total sales per value $12,875,000. Old U. S. Bonds unchanged on 6 1/2.
