LOTTE WILLIAMS
IN "A FULL HOUSE"
IS PLAYER OF NOTE

Lottie Williams, a popular comedienne well known for years on the stage, has an interesting role in support of Bryant Washburn, Paramount star, in the latest photoplay, "A Full House" which will be shown at the Alta theatre for 2 days beginning today.

Miss Williams is an actress of exceptional versatility. Beginning her career in vaudeville, she made her debut in drama when she created the role of Ah Mee, the slave girl in Charles Kenmore Ulrich's Chinese play "A Celestial Maiden," which successfully toured the Pacific Coast for many seasons. Quitting the legitimate stage, Miss Williams accepted the role of Susie, the maid in "A Full House" and her clever work adds much to the enjoyment of the spectators.

In the story, Susie steals a diamond necklace which has been stolen by a burglar, in order to obtain the reward of $5,000 offered for its return. She might have succeeded had not the house been surrounded by the police, and hiding it in her stockings, she keeps it until the burglar glimpses it and from his place of concealment cuts it out of the stockings.

There are many comical situations in "A Full House" and Mr. Washburn is at his best in the stellar role. Lois Wilson heads a capable supporting company of players. The picture was directed by James Cruze.
