New Arrival Is Healthy

Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Kerr, of Hermiston, recently welcomed a baby daughter who arrived at their home there. The little miss weighed 14 pounds at birth.

Office Is Opened

J. W. Witherell has opened an accounting office in the American National Bank building in offices formerly occupied by Dr. Floyd Croup, who left recently for Texas. Mr. Witherell, who has been in the offices of J. W. Cosper, accountant, since last November, will carry on a general accounting and income tax business. Before coming here he was with the Emergency Fleet Corporation in Portland.

Street Work Done Sunday

A Warren Construction Co., crew on Sunday patched several cuts in pavements about the city, one of the chief jobs being on Main street between Alta and Welb. The work on the north side of town had been completed, and under contract having been paved. No more is expected to be let until spring opens up.

Pendleton Learns Something

Pendleton today learned something regarding a big project that is soon to start from here. A letter from a man in New Mexico, to the Pendleton Commercial Association, asked complete details concerning a 595 mile railroad that he understands is to be built from Pendleton in the spring. Secretary C. K. Cranston said he was wholly unaware of such a project.

Bread to Be Cheaper

The Pendleton Baking Co., following its announcement Saturday that a cheaper bread would be sold, announced today that local grocers are somewhat opposed to selling the un-rubbed product. The local bakery states, however, that if there is a demand for the bread, it will be sold. The bread sells at seven cents, wholesale price, and nine cents retail.

New Pupils Enter

About 20 first graders entered school this morning and are enrolled in the grade schools. The children who are six years old or who will be six in March are permitted to enter at this time, which is the first day of the second school semester. Some pupils whose parents had announced their entrance at school did not report this morning on account of stormy weather.

Story Not All Told

A news note from the county court house in Thursday's paper mistakenly mentioned that Fred R. Young was given a judgment from Aaron and Ida Minthorn. His judgment was from Mrs. Yum-sim-kin. The judgment against the Minthorns was taken by the Dean Tatom Co. In composition the defendants in the one case and plaintiff in the other were left out, making but one judgment mentioned instead of two.

Directory Being Published

The B. L. Polk & Co., directory of Umatilla and Morrow counties, data for which was taken in Pendleton early last fall, is now in the hands of the printers and will be distributed shortly. This information was received from the company this morning by the Pendleton Commercial Association in response to a letter sent them asking if the publication would be issued. Data from other towns in the two counties was just finished Jan. 1, this letter said. The last directory containing Pendleton information was dated 1917.

Tax Blanks Received

Local persons who last year made a return for income tax are beginning to receive blanks upon which to report their 1920 incomes. The blanks are mailed from the office of the collector of internal revenue in Portland and have to be turned in on or before March 15, 1921. Persons who did not pay a tax last year but this year are obliged to make a return may obtain blanks at local banks or at the local office of the internal revenue department in the postoffice building. Income tax advisers will be in the local offices next month.

Urgo Park Conservation

Letters urging the Pendleton Commercial Association to join in protest against the use of a portion of Yellowstone National Park for a reservoir site for irrigation purposes have been received here. Supporters of the thought that national parks should be saved from commercialism ask that President-elect Harding be asked to appoint a man as secretary of the interior who will protect national parks against commercial invasion. They also ask that Senator Wesley L. Jones and Representative Each be asked to put through their Jones-Each bill in its original shape.

Schools Will Open

A three day dressmaking school will be opened tomorrow at Pilot Rock by Mrs. Edith G. Van Deusen, home demonstration agent. On Friday a school will be in session at Umatilla, at which time Mrs. Van Deusen will teach how to make plain and bound buttonholes, arrowheads, piping, binding, cording, sewing on of buttons, hooks and eyes, snap fasteners, the making of eyelets, darning, patching, the shrinking and sponging of cloth, and the making of plaited skirts. Mrs. Van Deusen will go to Athens Thursday night and will explain the hot lunch system now in use in various schools of the county.

ECONOMIC DEPRESSION HELPS FILL WEST POINT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—(U. P.)—Applications for entrance to West Point and Annapolis form an interesting index today to America's economic situation—so far as the young men of the country are concerned.

This developed here today in the belief expressed by officials of both academies that the present economic depression in the United States—whatever its cause or its probable duration—would remedy a situation which America's military and naval schools have faced since the end of the war. This situation, which developed almost immediately after the signing of the armistice, manifested itself in a disinclination of the American youth to adopt the career of either soldier or sailor.

Applications for entrance to West Point and Annapolis began to slump. The young man either was "sick of war" and everything pertaining thereto, or he found the opportunities in commercial and industrial life so attractive financially that he lost interest in the advantages presented by Uncle Sam's educational institutions.

As a result, congressmen in all parts of the country reported they were meeting difficulty in obtaining candidates for West Point and Annapolis. For a while the situation seemed serious. Even today some congressmen have failed to name their candidates, because they were unable to obtain applicants.

But the situation is beginning now to adjust itself rapidly, according to both army and naval authorities here.

With a noticeable diminution in the number of high-paid jobs, such as followed the war, the American youth apparently is reviving his appreciation of the opportunity to obtain an education, at the same time equipping himself for service as an officer in the army or navy. Applications to the academies are beginning to increase, say officials forecasting an end to the lack of interest that followed the war. The effect of the business slump on young men, they say, also is reflected in the stimulus that army and navy recruiting has received lately.

The next entrance examinations to Annapolis will be held February 16. Nominations to date number 308. That leaves about 500 congressional vacancies. A great many of these are expected to be filled by February, as entrance to Annapolis has been facilitated this year by adoption of the policy of admitting candidates on academic certificates from colleges and universities—a practice followed by West Point for several years. In addition, one hundred enlisted men are allowed each year to qualify for the naval academy. If all the vacancies are not filled in time for the February examinations, they will be continued until April, when spring examinations are held.

Washington officials of the military academy reported recently there were 140 congressional vacancies now available, for which no nominations had been made. They believed the state of affairs in the business world would aid in filling the vacancies, but declared that congressmen had not always employed the best methods for obtaining candidates. They stated, as an example, that in many instances where congressmen reported they had received no applications for West Point, they had been filled later by placing the opportunity before the Reserve Officers' Training Corps of colleges and universities. In these cases, students already had displayed their interest in military affairs, but had been overlooked by congressmen in their quest for prospective army officers.

DELIVER BALLOTS
WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—(U. P.)—Ballots of the presidential electors were delivered here by Mrs. Ethel R. Farnsworth, the first woman elector ever chosen in the state of Nebraska. In company with Senator Myers, ex-Montana, Mrs. Farnsworth called at the white house.
