SKELETON UNEARTHED BY WESTON WORKMEN

(East Oregonian Special.)

WESTON, Ore., Jan. 31.—As the county road crew were excavating for the erection of a rock crusher one mile above Blue Mountain station on Big Dry Creek, the workmen unearthed the skeleton of a man. The body had been buried in a hole that had been scooped out of a rocky embankment of the road. As reported in Weston, the body was carefully decomposed, as also was the clothing, but the bones did not appear to have been there a great many years, some say not more than five years. No one knows definitely whose remains it is, but according to a neighborhood gossip, it might be the remains of a step-son of the late Charles Sams.

The funeral of Mrs. Louise S. Hilderbrand, wife of Frank Hilderbrand, was held Wednesday afternoon. Her death was caused from an illness which she has had since last summer. Mrs. Hilderbrand was a pioneer resident of Weston. She is survived by a husband and six children, three daughters and three sons.

Mrs. Mary Reeves slipped on the ice and fell on her porch a few days ago and broke both the bones in her right forearm.

Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Adams and J. A. Fowle were Pendleton visitors Wednesday afternoon.

The Weston Country has been having a little snow on the ground for a considerable time. It snows some and then it chinkos some. About the time the small boy thinks it has snowed enough for him to get out his faithful coaster the warm winds will start up and the snow is soon all turned to slush.

S. A. Barnes, agent for the Pacific Grain company, and C. W. Avery, Weston's city marshal and water superintendent, are having twin offices fitted up in the Gould building, which they will occupy after February first.

Very little enthusiasm is being exhibited these days by the Weston wheat growers over the market reports. No wheat sales have been reported here for a long time.

THIS WAS A BAD SHOT

Shortly after arriving in St. Augustine, President-elect Harding and Senator Frelinghuysen rushed out to the St. Augustine golf links for the first game of his pre-inauguration vacation. Harding had just made a bad shot and was saying, "Oh, go!" as this picture was snapped. Frelinghuysen, on the left, is grinning—he's winning. On the right is the caddy. Harding has spent several vacations at St. Augustine and is familiar with the links.

Savings Accounts—Interest Days

On the first of February the interest on the savings accounts is computed and credited; then or later on this interest is entered on the pass-books when presented at the Teller's window, No. 5.

This time is particularly favorable to add to your savings account as much as you possibly can spare and keep this up persistently and systematically. It is thus that most can be accomplished with small savings.
