AMERICAN OPPOSITION TO JAPANESE POLICE CAUSES BAD FEELING

Serious Situation Develops Following Report of Firing on Five U. S. Sailors as Result of Communist Plot.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—(U. P.)—American opposition to policing of Vladivostok by Japanese forces is creating a "serious situation," according to official dispatches from Japan. Since the killing of Lieutenant Langdon by a Japanese sentry at Vladivostok, the feeling between the Japanese and other forces in the Siberian city are understood to have become increasingly tense. The report that five American soldiers were fired on by Russian communists in an effort to provoke an open breach between Japanese and Americans there is read with great interest. The United States is believed to have questioned Japan's right to occupy Vladivostok in its note protesting the killing of Lieutenant Langdon. The present administration, however, is expected to hand the whole situation over Harding for adjustment.

A sheriff's posse, which pursued them for the trail and returned to Alvin, Hobbs was kidnaped here last Saturday night, tarred and feathered and ordered to leave Houston within three days. He then went to several office buildings ordered from having colored men in his office. He handled many colored divorce cases and the kidnapers objected to his relations with negroes.

A Suspicious Nature

"Most of the moonshiners still are now found in the big cities." "I hope," said Uncle Bill Batteltop, "that fact hasn't anything to do with these census statistics about people refusing to live in the country."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

WASHINGTON TOWN GETS ALONG WITH WOMEN FOR MAYOR AND COUNCILMEN

TACOMA, Feb. 15.—(A. P.)—Lansley, a town of 250 on Whidbey Island, near here, has a city administration composed entirely of women. Miss Helen Cole, who was elected mayor a year ago, to fill out an unexpected term has been re-elected for a regular term and all the new council members are women. "When I was first elected," Miss Cole said recently, "one man said, 'Petitcoat government will soon peter out' and another asserted, 'you cannot expect to sell property in a town run by women.' That attitude on the part of a few has vanished." Miss Cole was formerly a school teacher. The men of the town have been a great help to her administration, she declared.

MORROW COUNTY POET EXTOLS POWER PROJECT

(Heppner Gazette-Times) Spencer Akers was among those who represented the Heppner Commercial Club at the big meeting in Pendleton last Saturday, and naturally he lunched freely of the "Pendleton Spirit" as it was dispersed there with enthusiasm. He was so thoroughly inoculated that he just had to "brank out" but still you while your time away.

Columbia Grand!

Who sleep so long in dormant state Awake thou from thy slumber bed And show the world thou art not dead.

Your mighty strength the West doth need; And measured by the faithful steel, A million times so great they say, But still you wait your time away.

As human power is very weak

Your strength at last he's come to seek Though long your might has been concealed He says it soon will be revealed.

He'll hitch you to a mighty dam— Assisted by our Uncle Sam, And check you in your natural flow And make you serve us 'fore you go.

It may be wrong to treat you thus, And let you foam and rant and fuss, And laugh at all your antics queer Just like a wild awakened deer.

Oh! River, of the sunset land! Thou mighty river of the sand! These two great things I ask of thee Before you gallop to the sea:

That you will furnish power great To all your farms, your towns, your mills, And have respect for those who toil by soaking well their sunburnt soil.

Please pardon me, Columbia, while I turn my face just once to smile, It won't, I'm sure, this mighty scheme Revert into a Piper's dream.

SENATOR DIAL WANTS JUDGE LANDIS TRIED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—(A. P.)—Senator Dial of South Carolina, said he would prefer charges against Judge Landis with the department of justice in connection with the judges' stand that the officials of the bank at Ottawa, Illinois were responsible for the embezzlement of $26,000 by the clerk because they paid him only $60 a month. Dial declares the judge's statements to be "apocryphal and revolutionary."

FAMOUS CUSTER WOLF 'KICKED THE BUCKET'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—(U. P.)—The famous "Custer Wolf" is dead. Shorn of statistics, it is a story of animal savagery and cunning unexcelled even in fiction.

For nine years, the wolf terrorized ranches 100 miles about Custer, S. D., and escaped hunters and trappers with such uncanny elusiveness that legends of the rancid country endowed him with a monstrous craftiness they said could come only of a sinister mating of wolf and mountain lion.

Department reports credited him with slaying $25,000 worth of livestock. He was here one night, and tomorrow, a hundred miles across the hills; he slaughtered a dozen cattle, mutilating them with a dozen lacerations—a leg broken, a tail bitten off. The price of his head was raised from $100 to $500.

Hunters shot at him only to miss or have their pieces fail. He carried away traps and skirted poison bait disdainfully. Riders said he bore a charmed life and they flattered their belts apprehensively at his ghoully wait-out of the night. Once stockmen thought they had located him and called a round-up. Four years ago, he lost his mate. He never took another. Finally, in March last year, H. P. Williams, government hunter, was ordered to the trail and not to return without the wolf. Williams scented his shoes and began laying traps. The old wolf, lured in great excitement by what he thought a possible mate, went to the Pelican mountains, cleared out two old dens and made a new one which ran 50 feet back under the hill.

On April 1, Williams sighted his quarry only to learn of new difficulties. The wolf had enlisted two coyotes as guards, one traveling 100 to 200 yards on either flank. Repeatedly baffled by the guards, Williams shot them. The wolf escaped.

Twice in May the wolf sprung traps. July 3 he lay down on the ground, some hair, scuttling from the region like a gray ghost, but a month later he returned, killing several cattle and crippling others. An accident saved him from Williams. In September he lost some more hair in a trap, but escaped.

Seven months after Williams took the trail, the end came. The wolf's forehead picked up a trap. He tore it from its mooring. A hundred and fifty yards away it caught on a tree, but he broke its neck. Three miles beyond Williams sighted him. "I expected the gun would fall to shoot, but it worked O. K. He is smaller than the average wolf, weighed 95 pounds," Williams' report said. "He is an old wolf, with a fur that is almost white."

MAKER OF FAMED PISCO PUNCH IN OTHER DAY IS TEACHING IN Y. M. C. A.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 15.—(A. P.)—Duncan Nicol, for half of a century owner of the old Bank Exchange saloon here, known probably everywhere for its pisco punches, is not living on memories of before-prohibition days. At 70 years of age he has started a course at the automobile school of the Young Men's Christian Association.

"Pisco John," as Nicol's place was known to thousands, and a bar and tiled floor which tradition said came around Cape Horn, thirty years ago. It was a resort of the gentle and the elite and because Nicol would permit no rowdiness, it became a privileged house where women might drink at the bar. Nightly scores from fashionable residence districts and uptown cafes went downtown to the Bank Exchange for the famed drink.

The Bank Exchange was opened in the fifties. In the twenties, Nicol, a lonely and penniless boy arrived from Scotland and soon after took over the resort. Then came the Pisco punch. Nicol says he cannot remember when he invented the drink.

Always the receipt for the punch has been a secret Nicol has kept. He alone knows what went into it. He studies Pisco Brandy in London and came around Cape Horn, thirty years ago. It was a resort of the gentle and the elite and because Nicol would permit no rowdiness, it became a privileged house where women might drink at the bar. Nightly scores from fashionable residence districts and uptown cafes went downtown to the Bank Exchange for the famed drink.

Prohibition came, the Bank Exchange closed and Nicol and his wife took a trip back to Scotland, but did not remain there long. "Even there prohibition is on its way," he asserted on returning. "It is a changed world."

Although his occupation of years was gone Nicol was not satisfied to remain idle. He entered the Y. M. C. A. school and took up the study of what makes the automobile go. "Young fellows like men can't afford to get rusty," he said.

The small stand where Harding will be inaugurated March 4 is being erected. It will cover only part of the east front stairway of the Capitol, as shown in the left picture. On the right, Congressman C. J. McLeod, aged 25, "the baby of the house," is shown driving the first nail in the stand.

Billie Burke (Mrs. Flo Ziegfeld Jr.) and daughter Patricia are snapped on the sand at the Palm Beach, Fla., Patricia thinks a beach is the best fun in the world.
