The storm night before last made no trouble whatever on the main line of the O. W. R. & N. Co. says H. W. Hicks, traveling passenger agent of the line, now in the city. However on the Bend branch some difficulty rose from mud slides in the Deschutes river canyon.

When Joe Kimery was a "greeter" and held forth at the Hotel St. George he and Mrs. Kimery were even better known in Pendleton than they are at present. Now they are growing wheat on an extensive scale near Echo. Mrs. Kimery came up last evening on a hurried shopping expedition, returning to the farm on the morning local.

Montgomery, with Roland Oliver, own wheat land in Montana which is being farmed by Mr. Oliver and M. O. Bennett.

To most of his friends he is known as Jack Clark but on the official records of the Knights of Pythias he is listed as W. J. H. Clark, grand chancellor of Oregon. Mr. Clark is in Pendleton today having arrived on No. 11 at noon. He is accompanied by Walter Heeson, grand keeper of records and seal who is about as well known in the state of Oregon as was his predecessor the late L. B. Steiner. The two men are going to Milton for a meeting with the lodge there this evening. On Wednesday evening they will visit the K. of P. lodge at Adams.

Provo Utah is the home town of a party sojourning here today. Those in the group are Mr. and Mrs. Leo Thompson, Mrs. Zina Thompson and son and Mr. and Mrs. Delosa Stewart.

W. M. Kilgore of Athena was here last night. He is the father of S. C. Kilgore who is now being cared for in a hospital here.
