DIGESTIVE SYSTEM OF DOG IS LIKE HUMAN

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, Corvallis, March 11.—Tell a man he eats like a dog and it may provoke him, but nevertheless, the digestive system of a dog is much like that of a human being, according to Dr. H. T. Simms, professor of veterinary medicine at the college. Dogs have the same organs of digestion and can eat the same types of food to get the same results. The time necessary and the easiest food for man to digest may be learned by testing them with the dog first.

Dogs are being used for research work in the various departments of the college. Not only are they operated on but occasionally a dog that has been in a fight or which has had a broken leg is rushed to the veterinary and comes out in a healthy condition ready to start life anew.

"The similarity between a dog and man makes it valuable for experiments," said Dr. Simms. "Many important facts may be obtained by trying various tests with dogs to see how they will work in the human case. Of course, those doing the surgery are humane in the treatment of the dogs. Chloroform or ether is used whenever necessary in any operation being made so there will be no pain."

GERMANS WILL VOTE

BERLIN, March 11.—(A. P.)—The mobilization of the men and women throughout Germany entitled to vote in the Upper Silesian plebiscite began yesterday in 20 of the large German cities. Special trains left Berlin for Breslau carrying banners with inscriptions urging Germans to rally to the salvation of Upper Silesia. Bands played patriotic music.

It is estimated at least 200,000 Germans eligible to vote will be sent to Upper Silesia and consequently transportation is taxed.
