WALLA WALLA, Wash., March 15.—(A. P.)—Spring athletic work is now in full swing at Whitman College here with 75 men out in baseball suits and 50 men working out with the track squad. Favorable weather conditions this spring has enabled Whitman athletes to start outdoor practice four weeks earlier than last year.

About two-thirds of the men enrolled at Whitman have turned out for spring athletic work, and as soon as the tennis courts are in shape an even larger portion is expected.

Whitman this year is expected to put a strong baseball team in the field and many lettermen of last year's nine are back at school.

Track work is to take a prominent part in Whitman athletics this year and although there are few experienced men in college, a number of the recruits show promise. They are working out under the direction of Hal Holmes, of Walla Walla.

CANNIBALS STILL EAT HUMAN BEINGS, SAYS 'KING OF THE MONKEYS'

NEW YORK, March 15.—(U. P.)—Reverend Roger S. Guphill, Methodist missionary to the Congo Belge, named by the cannibalistic natives, "King of the Monkeys," called en route to the mission station in the heart of the African jungles. Rev. Guphill received his name when with his wife and infant son he went 11 days' trek into the bush country north of the end of the Cape to Cairo railroad to the village of Kabongo, paramount chief of the Luba cannibals.

Mrs. Guphill and her baby were the first white woman and child to venture into that country, and all along the way were the objects of the greatest curiosity by the natives, some with poisoned arrows and spears. The Guphill infant was carried in a chest with screen wire sides, under lock and key, suspended from a pole which rested on the shoulders of two native carriers.

At the capital of the Chief Kabongo, the Guphills lived for six months, during which time the minister won many converts to Christianity. His church was built by convicted cannibals condemned as a penalty for shooting poisoned arrows at the chief's soldiers who came to investigate the disappearance of eighteen native carriers from the caravan of a Belgian official.

Rev. Guphill says the natives eat each other as much as formerly, but they take care to burn the bones to powder which they scatter in the swamps, thus hiding all trace of their deed.

Guphill was "King of the Monkeys," a term of respect for his wisdom, the natives holding a crude form of the Darwinian theory that monkeys are wiser than men.

And get more genuine chewing satisfaction, when you use this class of tobacco.

This is because the full, rich, real tobacco taste lasts so long, you don't need a fresh chew nearly as often.

And a small chew gives more real satisfaction than a big chew of the ordinary kind ever did.

Any man who uses the Real Tobacco Chew will tell you that.

FAIR JURORS OBJECT TO SEX CASES, WHILE SHAW DEFENDS MALE MORALS

LONDON, March 15.—(Floyd Allen, United Press Staff Correspondent)—The first divorce trial by a mixed jury brought protests from the fair sex, and a blast from George Bernard Shaw.

When the six jurywomen had tripped daintily into the jury-box, Sid Edward Marshall Hall opened his case for the co-respondent—an alleged erring wife—with diffidence and regret. Fully stated that the case was a particularly unavoury one.

When Sir Edward read passages from the man's letters several of the women shaded their faces with their hats. Their second sign of agitation was when a drawing was handed to the jury for inspection. It was in the nature of two outwardly blank cards together, which had to be held to a strong light to reveal a picture of indecency. Justice Horridge deprecated the necessity of showing anything so sordid to the women and while a court usher was busy holding a match behind the transparency for the benefit of the male jurors, the women hurriedly protested that they were ready to take the men's word for its unseemliness.

All the letters and evidence connected with the case were so redolent of sex suggestions as to make this first experience of jury work a very trying one for the women involved.

Married men are writing to the courts, as well as to the press to announce that they would rather pay fines than allow their wives or daughters to be exposed to such enforced intimacy with sordid details of human viciousness. Newspapers are full of public protestations against the new system. Only a few women are in favor of it.

In addition, George Bernard Shaw saw fit to write to the press, asking to be allowed, as a member of the male sex, to protest against the whole of the proceedings. He pointed out that, according to the manner of conducting the case, the conclusion seems to be arrived at that all men are familiar with obscene picture cards. He is indignant that the men should have been asked to examine such documents and "tell the innocent women what they thought about them." He continued:

"Now I am a married man in my sixty-fifth year and I solemnly protest that I am entirely guiltless of this alleged male habit of reading abominable and beastly letters and gloating over pornographic pictures.

"Sir Edward Marshall Hall's assumption that my sensibilities in this matter are less delicate than those of women is not only unfounded, but extremely offensive. Why in the name of common sense did the binding barrister exclude the six jurywomen from the apology which he thought it necessary to make for presenting them to the six jurywomen?"

Much was said in the press of the fact that three of the jurywomen were unmarried. G. B. S. pointed out that for all anyone knew, all six jurywomen were unmarried. He also expressed his indignation that one of the jurywomen, at least, should not have formed her own opinion of the "transparency." The jurywoman in question was Miss Lillian Barker, a well known rescue and welfare worker.

"I need not emphasize the gross absurdity," said Shaw, "of referring Miss Lillian Barker, whose extraordinary record as a welfare worker, to say nothing of her present responsible employment, makes her judgment more valuable in any question of domestic immorality than that of the whole British bar and bench, to the nearest juryman, possibly a bashful novice of twenty-two, for instructions as to what she should think of an improper picture."

This letter of Shaw's raised another moot question—Is it worse for a woman of thirty or more, whether married or unmarried, to be shown such obscene documents, than it is for a young man of twenty-two, regardless of whether he is married or not? Women may only vote when they have reached the age of thirty, therefore they must be over thirty before they are called to a jury.

CLOSER TO GROUND

The "ten-inch deadline" for skirts is decreed by the Fashion Art League of America. The league says that all women, short and tall, are about the same height from heel to knee and thus the ten-inch deadline is fair to all.

This young woman wears a suit of knotted silk fabric in striped effect and black velvet in combination. Maybe it's the striped effect or the velvet, but her skirt hem looks closer to the ground than ten inches.
